BRITISH HOLDING AT THERMOPYLAE

By the Associated Press

British expeditionary troops were reported still fighting desperately today in the Thermopylae sector, 100 miles north of Athens, in what was apparently a rearguard action to check Germany's blitzkrieg armies until the main body of the BEF has embarked from southern Greece.

German aviators described scenes of the wildest confusion as Nazi Stuka dive-bombers rained death and destruction on troop-jammed British transports.

Berlin sources asserted that at least 160,000 tons of ships had been sunk, and an official Greek communique acknowledged that assaults by waves of screaming Stukas had inflicted "considerable damage to ships and other installations."

The Berlin newspaper Allgemeine Zeitung asserted that the German army was approaching Athens by way of Thebes, about 35 miles northwest of the Greek capital as the crow flies.

DNB, German official news agency, said that in the drive through Thessaly to southern Greece, the Nazis captured several thousand British soldiers at one camp along with "hundrdes of tanks and trucks, munitions, provisions and several three-inch guns."

With "energy and determination" British and imperial troops can hold their present positions in Greece, Sir Thomas Blamey, newly appointed deputy commander of Middle Eastern forces, said in an order of the day issued in London this afternoon, International News Service reported.

Sir Thomas praised the manner in which Australian forces carried out their orderly retreat in Greece "despite continuous enemy air bombardment of the roads."

"Fortunately," he said, "our losses have been slight. We have learned how very inaccurate air bombings can be."

ATHENS FALL LOOMS

While the fall of Athens and the end of the 19-day-old battle of the Balkans appeared imminent, authoritative quarters in London insisted that BEF troops were clinging stubbornly to defense positions in the Thermopylae zone.

It was in this historic sector, the scene of bloody strife 2400 years ago, that the Germans claimed yesterday their panzer columns had smashed the British rearguard and plunged on toward Athens.

A British spokesman declared that reports the British flank had been turned were without basis. He said it was "very doubtful," too, that the Germans had seized the Treasury Proposes 16.5 P.C. Income Tax

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 24—The Treasury today presented Congress with its plan to raise $3,500,000,000 in additional revenue, disclosing an overall increase in the present income tax rate from 4.4 per cent, the current rate, to a new high of 16.5 per cent.

Treasury experts advised the House Ways and Means Committee that assuming state and local taxes remain the same, the boost in the federal levies will mean that all taxing agencies, federal, state and local, will be taking 24 per cent of the national income next year.

The plan was outlined to the committee by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John L. Sullivan after Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau—appearing as the opening witness—had warned the nation that all classes of its citizens, the poor and the rich, "shall bear their fair shares of the burden" entailed by the national defense effort.

REJECTS SALES TAX

Sullivan said:

"The proposed increases in the personal income taxes are substantial. On the first bracket of income above personal exemption, the combined surtax, normal tax and defense tax rate is 16.5 per cent as compared with 4.4 per cent under present law.

"Increases are proposed throughout much of the rate schedule, but they taper off as the very high rate of the higher brackets are reached."

Rejecting a general sales tax, Sullivan said the Treasury propsal is divided one-third from so-called ability-to-pay taxes, one-third from corporate taxes and one-third from excise taxes.

It calls for an increase of $1,521,000,000 in individual income taxes, $347,000,000 in estate and gift taxes; $935,000,000 in corporation taxes, and $1,233,000,000 from excise levies.

Salient features of the program are:

Individual income tax exemptions of $800 for single persons, and $2,000 for married persons are unchanged.

Increases are made in the surtax bracket, the surtax racket starting on all taxable incomes and run from 11 to 75 per cent.

BOOST GIFT TAXES

Corporation income tax rates increased by a surtax of five per cent on first $25,000 net income and six per cent on the balance.

Estate and gift tax rates increased and specific exemptions cut from $40,000 to $25,000. The increase ranges from 1200 per cent on a $50,000 estate to .9 per cent on a $100,000,000 estate.

Increases in the excess profits tax to yield $400,000,000 by reducing credit and increasing rates.

Many increases in present rates and additional new excises were

Churchill to Tell Of Greek Campaign

LONDON, April 24 (AP)—For the second time in three days Prime Minister Winston Churchill asked Parliament today to postpone a debate on the war, but hinted he might make a broadcast on the Greek campaign in the meantime. He volunteered the remark that he was aware the House expected a debate on the war, and said it would be held "at the earliest moment which enables the government to give a full and reasonable account of what has taken place."

Pope Asks Catholics Devote All of May To Peace Prayers

VATICAN CITY, April 24 (AP)—Pope Pius XII asked Catholics throughout the world today to pray for peace—the third such appeal of his pontificate.

The appeal, made in the form of a letter addressed to Luigi Cardinal Maglione, papal secretary of state, asked Catholics to devote the month of May to peace prayers.

The Pope called upon the faithful to pray that "where now deep enmities are aroused, unhappily provoking widespread disorder, there may be effected new ties of friendship which will calm the hearts of men and bring to the universe tranquility of an order founded on justice."

CALLS ON CHILDREN

He asked children especially to pray that "the duration of this awful misfortune be brief' and to offer their prayers for the wounded, prisoners and exiles.

Following is the official English text of the Pontiff's appeal:

"While we are fully confident that the faithful, and especially children under guidance of their parents, will be mindful of our invitation of last year and will gather before the altar of the Most Blessed Virgin, the Mother of God, during the coming month of May to invoke peace for anguished and afflicted humanity, we desire nevertheless through the medium of this letter addressed to you to repeat that exhortation to all.

"As the bitterness of war increasingly distresses and crushes the hearts of men and as dangers of every sort threatening so many nations become more appalling, we confidently express the wish that the faithful raise minds and hearts in prayer to heaven, whence alone, in the midst of such profound mental perplexity and material disorder, can come hope of better days.

MUST CONTINUE

"If our prayers and aspirations have not as yet had the result which we ardently desired, our trust in God must not be lessened on this account, but we must all continue with constant and persevering devotion to be 'patient in tribulation, instant in prayer' (Romans, 12:12).

"The signs of God are hidden from us, but we are certain, although innumerable and grave ofenses call down avenging justice of heaven, the Lord nevertheless is 'father of mercies and God of all comfort' (Second Corinthians, 1:3) and we know his love and benevolence for us is boundless.

"But there is still another motive for our trust and hope for we have at the throne of Almighty God the most amiable Mother of God and our mother who, through her all-powerful intercession, can certainly obtain for us all the favors she asks of Him.

DRY OUR TEARS

"Let us then place ourselves and our problems under her pro-

U. S. EXTENDS ITS ATLANTIC PATROL ZONE

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 24 (INS)—Washington officials today admitted for the first time that the United States has extended its patrol of the Atlantic beyond the original 300-mile neutrality limit—possibly as much as 700 miles closer to Europe's war.

Following the announcement of Mayor La Guardia of New York that the U. S. has decided to defend the waters of this hemisphere 1000 miles out to sea, Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early admitted that American warships are now operating beyond the 300-mile limit established by the declaration of Panama.

Although Early declined to divulge just how far out the Navy is operating, he said he thought it had been proven that the patrol is now extended further than the Panama limit.

PROTECT SEA ROUTES

He recalled that the German liner Columbus was scuttled some time ago by its crew beyond the 300-mile limit and that the U. S. Cruiser Tuscaloosa was on hand to rescue the German sailors.

Early's statement represented the first public admission by any official of the government that American warships are operating beyond the 300-mile limit of the

BRITISH CLAIM RAF SCORES HEAVY HITS ON SCHARNHORST, GNEISENAU

LONDON, April 24 (INS)—Germany's two 26,000-ton battleships, the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, have been crippled in a series of RAF attacks on their berths in Brest, it was understood authoritatively today.

The Scharnhorst, credited with numerous ship sinkings as a raider in the Atlantic shipping lanes leading from America, has been put into drydock for repairs to her badly damaged bows, it was stated. She is expected to be out of action for several months.

The Gnisenau, also a far-ranging raider, was believed to have been hit amidship in an earlier raid.

Still another attack was made on the Scharnhorst and Geneisenau last night. One of the two battleships was blasted by an "exceptionally large bomb" in another recent RAF raid, the air ministry announced.

Damage to the Schrnhorst or Gneisenau was revealed when the Distinguished Flying Cross was awarded to Pilot Officer Grahame Robert Ross, who flew the plane which scored the hit.

The attack was one of many directed against Brest, where the two big ships have been docked for several weeks.

PRINCIPAL SPEAKERS AT "ANTI-WAR" RALLY—Before an audience of 25,000 listeners in Madison Square Garden, New York, principal speakers of the anti-war mass meeting sponsored by the "America First" committee were (l. to r.) Col. Charles Lindbergh, Novelist Kathleen Norris and Sen. David I. Walsh of Massachusetts. Lindbergh told gathering that Great Britain is losing the war and the United States can do nothing to stem the tide of German victory.

Britain Lost Despite U.S., Lindy Warns

NEW YORK, April 24 (INS)—Great Britain is losing the war and there is nothing the United States can do to stem the tide of German victory, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh maintained today.

Britain's last desperate hope, Lindbergh told 25,000 persons gathered at a mass meeting of the America First Committee, is to persuade the U. S. to send another expeditionary force to Europe.

"France has now been defeated, and despite the propaganda and confusion of recent months it is now obvious that England is losing the war," he said. "I believe this is realized by even the British government."

Dispatch of an expeditionary force to Europe, Lindbergh contended, would only put the United States in the position of sharing "with England militarily, as well as financially, the fiasco of this war."

ASSAILS ENGLAND

Assailing England for promising aid to any and all nations that would join her cause—aid that, he said, she could not give—Lindbergh declared:

"We know that she misinformed them as she has misinformed us, concerning her state of preparation, her military strength and the progress of the war.

"We in this country have a right to think of the welfare of America first, just as the people in England thought of their own country when they encouraged the smaller nations of Europe to fight against hopeless odds.

"When England asks us to enter this war, she is considering her own future and that of her empire. In making our reply, I believe we should consider the future of the United States and that of the Western Hemisphere."

Even if America were fully prepared, Lindbergh argued, there is no place where the United States might base and maintain an army

Buck Privates Study Budget And It's 'No Soap'

FORT BENNING, Ga., April 24 (AP)—Two privates of the 78th Field Artillery, second armored division, were discussing their joint budget.

"We must cut down on expenses," said one. "Last week we spent $3 on entertainment, 35 cents for magazines and 20 cents for soap."

"Yeah," agreed the other, "we better cut down on the soap."

Somerville Man Hangs Self in Cellar

Medical Examiner Dr. G. Stanley Miles issued a certificate of "suicide by hanging while mentally deranged."

CARDINAL MAKES PLEA TO KEEP OUT OF WAR

Cardinal O'Connell took an unequivocal stand against United States entry into the European war in an address to 1500 delegates to the fifth Diocesan Congress of Catholic Women and urged their prayers "that all the officials of our government will stand out strong and firm in the determination that this nation shall not be dragged into this war."

He spoke out against propaganda which "would drag us into this infamous war," and declared that "when one sees the vicious propaganda that is going about one wonders if Americans really love their own country."

"We all know that Americans are generous-hearted," he added:

ADVICE TO NATION

His advice to the nation was:

"Let those who have started this war finish it; it is not our affair."

The present war, Cardinal O'Connell declared, is a war of cowardice and not of bravery.

"Bravery is wonderful," he said, "but is starving a lot of women and children bravery? Is skulking under the ocean bravery? It is cowardice. Don't let them put over on us that this is a courageous war. We have the word of our President that we will not be drawn into it. I realize the pressure of propaganda being exerted, but pray with me that we will resist it."

Cardinal O'Connell expressed sympathy with the small nations conquered by superior might, but said they were helpless before machines. The present chaos which has swept over the world he likened to the recent Marshfield fire, ever spreading in its destruction.

CALLS ON WOMEN

He then called upon women to keep alive ideals and standards of true Christianity and to fight against the prevalence of pagan doctrines.

"Millions of women," Cardinal O'Connell said, "are trying to keep alive ideals in the presence of this tremendous decadence. The world, at present, is bereft of its senses; because of hate it has ceased to reason. Our duty is to rededicate ourselves to God.

"There is a creeping paralysis in the attitude of people; decadence in morals, in the stage and screen and even in picture books. The fundamentals of Christianity are being challenged in our lay schools and professors act as if determined to put Christ out of the world. Thank God, we have men and women who know how to keep the fundamentals and express them."

The congress, in a previous morning session, had passed resolutions pledging opposition to the child labor amendment and all legislative measures advocating any type of birth control.

6 Indictments Now Loom in Buckley Probe

Two attorneys and four other persons are to be indicted on charges of conspiracy to extort money from State Auditor Thomas J. Buckley, it was learned today.

Witnesses, whom a Suffolk County grand jury heard last week, have involved the two lawyers, it was learned, and the grand jury will vote on indictments this afternoon.

On reliable authority it was learned Dist. Atty. William J. Foley has asked that at least the six persons be indicted.

The grand jury will report to Judge Edward F. Hanify tomorrow morning.

The grand jury investigation came about as an outgrowth of an inquest on charges of improper practices brought against Auditor Buckley following his surprise election.

In exonerating Buckley, Municipal Court Judge Frank W. Tomasello said he found evidence of an attempt to extort money from Buckley on the part of Philip A. Burns, Frank McQuade and others and recommended an investigation.

MARSHFIELD TO GET TAXES FROM INSURED

Property owners who lost their houses in the Marshfield beach conflagration and who had no insurance will not be pressed for their taxes, it was assured today by Robert S. Boles, chairman of the Marshfield board of selectmen.

He said that persons who had insurance must pay the taxes, as of Jan. 1 of this year, and he estimated that this group would compose about two-thirds of the whole.

The majority of cottagers, Boles pointed out, had mortgages on the houses, and in order to secure those mortgages they must have had insurance.

Thus the town expects to collect about $30,000 in taxes from the normal levy of $45,000.

PLAN MODERN RESORT

Meanwhile, only three days after the $1,200,000 fire devastated the Ocean Bluff area, plans were under way to build on the site the most modern beach resort in the State—with emphasis on safeguards against a similar catastrophe.

Appointment of a 14-man commission to discuss plans for rebuilding the area and to make recommendations to be placed before a special town meeting in about a month was announced by Boles.

Summer and permanent residents as well as planning experts are on the board which consists of William V. Murphy, Harry Eddzel, C. G. Starratt, William E. Peck, Jr., of Quincy, Town Treasurer Shirley R. Cross, William G. Ford, George Conwell, John W. Emery, Fred Roberts, Charles F. Hilly, George Watson, Frank L. Sinnott, Town Counsel A. S. Feinberg of Plymouth and J. Warren Keane.

WORK WITH COMMITTEE

Working with the committee will be P. C. Charnock, head of the New England rating bureau and representing insurance interests, and Chairman Frederick L. Bailey of the Plymouth County Commissioners.

Suggestions already made are that Ocean st., the main highway along the beach front, be widened to enlarge parking facilities and eliminate traffic jams and that local traffic be diverted to a parallel road to be built a few hundred yards inland.

One of the first buildings to be rebuilt, according to present plans, is St. Anne's-by-the-Sea Church, and arrangements are being made to provide religious services for the parishioners elsewhere.

7-BILLION CHIEF HOPKINS GETS $10,000

WASHINGTON, April 24 (INS)—President Roosevelt today put Harry L. Hopkins on the White House payroll at $10,000 a year and formally placed him in charge of handling the vast $7,000,000,000 Lend-Lease Aid Act.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt appointed Wayne Coy of Indiana, now assistant to Federal Social Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, to be a special assistant to the President at a salary of $9000 a year.

Coy is to act as liaison officer for the Office of Emergency Management. In that capacity, the White House announced Coy will assist the Chief Executive in carrying out the President's duties as head of OEM.

Forest Fires Still Hazard

Scattered showers reduced but did not eliminate the forest and brush fire hazard in Massachusetts, Conservation Commissioner Raymond J. Kenney said today.

Kenney said information reaching his office indicated that all the fires which inflicted damage well above $1,500,000 during the past week had been extinguished, but that rainfall was so light in some sections the woods might again become tinder-dry.

ONE FOR THE BOOK—It's the fire journal, as a matter of fact, the record book kept by Combination No. 1 of the Marshfield fire department for that station's calls, the times leaving and returning, the number of men working at each fire. Very meticulously it has been kept: "April 9 Grass—Saginaw ave. (1 Car) 6:10 P. 8:00 13," "10 Grass Bryant's Field 1:50 P 3:50 P 13," "12 Fieldston Lodge 7:50 P 8:30 P 11." The last entry is for April 21, last Monday. Again Fieldston Lodge is entered, very matter-of-fact. The time of leaving the station is duly inscribed, "1:15 P." But a bit overwhelmed by it all, the keeper of the journal later inscribed "Whole Dam Beach." Not yet has the time of return been entered or the number of men working at the fire.

All Draft Age Men Warned to Carry Registration Proof

All men in the draft age were notified today they must carry with them at all times the certificate showing they have registered with a draft board and must present it on request of any law enforcement officer or selective service official.

The announcement came from Lieut.-Col. Ralph M. Smith, assistant state director of selective service, who said an amendment to regulations now makes it mandatory to carry the draft card issued to each registrant.

30 Soldiers In March To Nowhere

Thirty volunteer doughboys from New England will go on eight-hour "hikes-to-nowhere," first in tropic and then in arctic weather conditions, the War Department announced today.

Though they march eight hours, they will get nowhere, and for the tropic and arctic weather conditions they will travel no further than the Fatigue Laboratory at Harvard University.

The War Department said that to find out how soldiers and their equipment stand up under long hikes in extreme weather conditions, 30 volunteers would enter the treadmill room of the laboratory, where any weather conditions can be manufactured, and march and march.

The tests will be conducted under supervision of Dr. Cecil Drinker of the Harvard School of Public Health.

First tests—to be made shortly—will find the men marching in a dry and torrid room, with the temperature at 160 degrees—the heat of desert sands. The men will have a 10-minute rest period every hour, and will be given frequent physical examinations. Their clothes and equipment—they will be in full marching kit—will also be tested.

In later tests the temperature will be dropped to far below zero.

COAL STRIKE PARLEY HITS NEW DELAY

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—Chairman Ezra Van Horn today announced adjournment of the Appalachian coal wage conference subject to the call of the chair and conferees said certification of the bituminous case to the national mediation board meant "further delay" in settling the coal stoppage.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers (CIO), said:

"It is unfortunate that the Secretary of Labor did not defer certification of this case until the public had a chance to evaluate the refusal of Southern operators to accept the proposal of the President.

"Further delay in resumption of operations and of coal production is now inescapable. For this we disclaim any responsibility."

Charles O'Neill, speaking for the northern Appalachian coal operators, said they had "negotiated an agreement with the United Mine Workers" and were "anxious to bring about a resumption of work."

"We recognize the seriousness of the situation as it is developing," O'Neill said, "the great and terrifying rapidity with which it is developing.

"We believe the country is face to face with an extreme shortage of coal. Many plants vital and necesary to defense are now closing down or going on partial operations due to the lack of coal.

"The situation will become worse daily, and the accumulation of shortages will increase with each passing day."

BANDIT ENDS LIFE AFTER N. Y. BATTLE

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—A chambermaid was beaten, a traffic patrolman was shot and a robber killed himself to avoid capture today in an attempted holdup and gun battle sequel at the New York Athletic Club on Central Park.

One companion of the suicide bandit later was captured and a third escaped after the patrolman was felled with a bullet in the hip.

From witnesses to the quick-breaking series of events at 59th st. and Seventh ave. this account was pieced together:

Three bandits invaded the club and, without arousing suspicions, reached the 19th floor, intending, police said, to hold up Frank Erickson, well-known bookmaker, who has a room there.

The door was locked and a chambermaid refused to give the men a key. They beat her on the head with pistol butts and fled.

They came out of the club's service entrance on 58th st. with drawn guns, said Cab Driver Homer Liebowitz, and started to run. Patrolman George Schuck started pursuit and fired several shots before he was dropped with a bullet from a bandit gun.

Liebowitz said he picked up the officer's revolver to continue the chase, but Schuck directed him not to fire.

The robbers divided, two running in one direction and the third rounding the corner into Central Park south. At gunpoint he ordered a chauffeur and his woman employer out of a parked limousine and jumped behind the wheel.

The car collided with another after moving but a few feet and the bandit shot himself in the head when other police closed in on him.

Girl Smacks Testimony Of Wife in Divorce Case

SALEM, April 24—Things became a little mixed up today in the resumed Meggison divorce hearing in probate court when Irene Koczinski Szczechowicz testified that Stephen Wlodkowski certainly did know Mrs. Eileen Meggison, because Irene had seen them together.

Through the action, Eileen seeks to divorce Frank Meggison, also of Lynn, on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment, and he is contesting the suit with a general denial.

On Tuesday both Wlodkowski and Mrs. Meggison had testified the other was "a perfect stranger."

OFFERED $200

Further, Stephen testified that Meggison, a fellow worker at a Lynn electrical plant, once had offered Stephen $200 to go on the stand and "say something bad" about Mrs. Meggison.

Today Stephen was recalled to the stand briefly and in answer to a question admitted that he knew Irene Szczechowicz, an attractive blonde from Lynn. As to her being a relative, he said if she was, the relationship probably was distant.

Then Irene was called and she immediately contradicted the stories of Steve and Eileen that they did not know each other.

KNOWS STEVE WELL

She herself, the witness said, has known Steve "very well for about 15 years."

Q—Were you present at a house party five or six years ago at Frank Meggison's mother's home when Steve was present? A—Yes.

Q—Whether Mrs. Eileen Meggison was there that evening? A—Yes.

Q—On how many occasions? A—One.

Q—Were they dancing together? A—I don't recall whether they were dancing together.

Q—At the house party, when did Steve come in and when did Eileen come in? A—Steve was there for the best part of the evening. Eileen was there for a while.

Q—Whether or not Eileen and Steve were drinking that night at the house party? A—Yes, they were.

Mrs. Carlisle Holt, Salem society woman, then was called and testified that during a period when Meggison worked for her as a handyman he always spoke well of his wife.

"I never heard Frank say anything but that he loved her frightfully," testified Mrs. Holt, "and I have never heard him say anything but what a perfect creature she was."

SITTING ON LAP

Mary E. Maguire of Swampscott and George E. Webber, Jr., of Lynn, also an electric company employe, both testified that they had seen Steve and Eileen together at the house party and at a dance hall.

Miss Maguire testified that Steve told her he didn't like to dance with Eileen, because she was too tall.

Webber testified that at the house party he had seen Eileen sitting on Steve's lap in the kitchen, but under cross-examination the witness admitted that this was because there were no available chairs in the kitchen.

Judge Harry Mamber of Lynn, counsel for Eileen, also drew from Webber the admission that he "never saw anything wrong" between Steve and Eileen and that they were not "mugging" in the kitchen.

Mrs. Dewing Fails to Save Harvard Boy Fine of $35

Despite testimony in his behalf by Mrs. Elizabeth F. Dewing of Wellesley, wife of the district attorney of Norfolk County, John Crane-Baker, 19-year-old Harvard student and ex-machine gunner of the Finnish and Polish wars, today was fined $35 on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor.

Crane-Baker appeared before Judge Donald E. Mayberry in Newton court on summons by Officer John Fitzsimmons, who testified that he chased the youth in Newton on April 15 at a 70-mile-anhour clip and that Crane-Baker told him he had five or 10 drinks.

"I was angry by then," the Harvard student told Judge Mayberry. "As a matter of fact, I had only one drink of sherry at the home of Mrs. Dewing, and it had no effect on me. I was brought up on the Continent, where we always drink wine."

Crane-Baker said that he had gone with John F. Seiberling, Jr., 22, another Harvard student and scion of the famous tire family of Akron, O., to the Dewing home to visit one of the Dewing girls, but she was not at home and after one glass of wine they started back for Harvard.

In his own behalf Crane-Baker said he had fought as a machine gunner in the Finnish and Polish wars, and that he had been shell-shocked when a house in Poland was shelled while he was in it.

"That was what made me get mad so easily," he said. "I asked for a blood test to prove I was sober, but I didn't get one. Then the police offered to release me, but I wouldn't sign a waiver."

After Mrs. Dewing had testified the two were sober when they left her house a short while before they were arrested, Judge Mayberry said:

He found both boys not guilty of drunkenness. Crane-Baker appealed the drunken driving finding against him.

U. S. Cutter to Get Disabled Dragger

The Coast Guard cutter Cayuga, on her way back to Boston from patrol duty off Newfoundland, will stop to pick up the disabled 102-foot Gloucester fishing dragger Ruth and Margaret, drifting 200 miles east of Nava Scotia, Coast Guard officials in Boston said today.

The cutter Dix has already left Boston to aid the Ruth and Margaret, and the Cayuga will transfer tow of the disabled fishing vessel to the Dix somewhere at sea, it was said. The Cayuga then will proceed to Boston for overhauling.

"Sulfa" Compound Aids Sinus Victims

CHICAGO, April 24 (AP)—One of the newer "sulfa" compounds was reported today to relieve chronic sinus trouble better than any medicine now used.

The new drug is the sodium salt of sufathiazole. It was found to be effective when a five per cent solution was used as a nasal spray.

Filling Stations In Maine to Employ Girls

PORTLAND, Me., April 24 (AP)—Hiring of young women as gasoline station attendants and for machine shop work was reported today as placements by the Maine Employment Service's Portland office reached an all-time high.

Fred A. Herron, office manager, said three large oil companies had asked his office to supply them with women for filling station work. The qualifications: Attractive, between the ages of 20 and 28, with no experience required.

Thirty women, Herron said, were engaged in making small castings and polishing parts for airplane motors at a Portland Machine Co. which recently was awarded a $350,000 contract by an airplane manufacturing concern.

Opportunities for girls and women to obtain jobs were far better today than ever before because of the Army industries, Herron said.

BANDITS ELUDE POLICE AFTER STORE SHOOTING

Shot by one of three bandits who afterward escaped in a wild auto chase and then a flight on foot in the Dorchester Bay area, William Pearlmutter, 24, of Crawford st., Roxbury, rallied today at City Hospital.

Although he was under observation in the shock room, with a bullet wound in his right breast, Pearlmutter was able to talk with relatives and to joke over his experience, although he said sometimes it "seems like a bad dream."

Meanwhile police had conducted a fruitless search for the bandits in the sparsely settled section near Old Colony blvd. and Freeport st., Dorchester, where the gunmen's car rammed another machine to end its 80-mile-an-hour flight.

Leaping from their smashed machine, the men fled into the fields amid a fusillade of shots from police bullets. Officers led by Sergt. Harold Hickey of the Dudley st. station started an immediate search. A youth was picked up in Ashland st., Savin Hill, but released after questioning.

SHOT IN CHEST

Pearlmutter was shot down soon after two of the gunmen, wearing handkerchief masks, strode into the Homestead Pharmacy at Humboldt ave. and Homestead st., Roxbury.

Plainly nervous and excited, the bandits shouted contradictory orders, commanding Nathaniel Grunthal, the proprietor, and five customers first to lie down, then to go into a rear room after placing their money on a table.

SEARCHED POCKETS

When Pearlmutter ignored the orders and made a move as though to resist the men, the taller of the two bandits struck him on the head with the barrel of his gun. As he slumped to the floor, Pearlmutter was shot without warning by the second bandit, a short man of about 22.

Before running from the store, they paused long enough to go through Pearlmutter's pockets as he lay on the floor. He was robbed of $20.

With their loot of more than $150, they jumped into an awaiting sedan. A third man was at the wheel.

A few minutes later it was spotted on Columbia rd., near Uphams Corner and a wild police chase ensued. The fleeing machine struck an auto driven by Royden Loring of Harle yst., Dorchester, at the Freeport st., rotary, and turned

New Hungary Premier Tightens Ban on Jews

BUDAPEST, Hungary, April 24 (AP)—Premier Laszolo De Bardossy, in his first speech before Parliament since he took leadership of the government, announced today a third anti-semitic decree which will exclude Jews entirely from social, political and religious activities in the nation.

No details were given concerning the law, which the late Premier CountPal Teleki drafted but never effected. Amid applause Bardossy expressed gratitude to Hitler and Mussolini.

CONGRESS TO SPEED MEXICO EARTHQUAKE AID

Special to Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, April 24—Congress today was asked to appropriate $200,000 for the American Red Cross relief of earthquake victims in the Colima region of Mexico.

Rep. Samuel Dickstein (D.), of New York, introduced in the House a joint resolution authorizing the appropriation, which was referred to the foreign affairs committee. In offering the resolution, Dickstein said:

"I believe, at this time, when hemisphere solidarity is so much in the order of the day, that it is particularly fitting that this country should appropriate as much money as necessary to help the stricken victims of the forces of nature."

BLOOM APPROVES

Declaring he was "in complete sympathy with the purpose of this measure," Chairman Bloom (D.) of the House foreign affairs committee, today forwarded the resolution to the State Department for its approval.

His action came as New York's two senators, Wagner and Mead, joined with members of the House in urging aid to the stricken town, half of whose 15,000 population are reported homeless in the wake of one of the most disastrous tragedies in Mexican history.

Pending word from the State Department, Bloom asserted:

WILL AID PASSAGE

"I shall be happy to call a hearing of our committee on this measure at any time that I am requested to do so. I think it is a splendid idea to show our friendship for our unfortunate neighbors to the south and I shall do all that I can."

Doctors Here Fail to Agree On Migraine Headache Causes

Strong headaches for the headstrong would seem to be the rule resolved by the medicos.

Migraine, the worst type of headache, Dr. William G. Lennox, of Boston, told the American College of Physicians today, most often appears in the "driving sort of person, the perfectionist, the one who must do what he wants even if it does cause a headache".

SIZE UP INDIVIDUAL

The difficulty lies not so much in lack of a cure but in finding the right cure for the particular victim. A remedy such as the new discovery, ergotaime tartarate, may work for one individual but prove absolutely useless for another.

Dr. Lennox, speaking at a panel discussion of migraine, cited as an example of the "driving" type the case of a doctor who suffered from migraine three times a week. On the days he was afflicted he kept office hours from noon until 10 at night—extremely long hours for any doctor.

Why the new remedy Ergotaime Tartarate fails in many cases, the doctors decided, is because the administering physician is sometimes afraid to give sufficiently large doses because of the danger of ergot poisoning.

SCREWY CURES WORK

The idea that allergy, or sensitivity, to dusts, pollens or foods causes migraine in some persons was discarded by Dr. F. M. Rakmann, noted Boston migraine specialist.

He asked the 200 doctors present to raise their hands if any knew positively of this kind of migraine. Eight hands came up. These doctors cited 11 cases of migraine of this type, of which eight were due to sensitivity to chocolate.

Indicating the diversity of the cause of migraine, doctors present told of five different surgical operations on head nerves which occationally relieve the ailment. The operations seem to stop the pain by preventing the arteries from swelling.

Vets to Probe Radio Talk by Orson Welles

Special to The Boston American

MILWAUKEE, April 24 The rising storm of protest of groups from coast to coast against subversive propaganda seen in the free company series of radio broadcasts is expected to be co-ordinated into a unified national program May 1 and 2 when American Legion leaders gather in Indianapolis.

The prospect was outlined by Homer Chaillaux, national legion Americanism chairman, when he arrived to speak at a meeting of Tanner Paull Post at its West Allis clubhouse.

Resolutions adopted far and wide by state departments of the Legion will be taken up and acted upon, he said, when the national executive committee and the national Americanism commission hold their regular meeting at Legion headquarters in Indianapolis.

He said a likely result will be an order for the Americanism commission to push an intensive investigation of the Free Company broadcasts and the volunteer writers, actors and others participating in them.

Especial criticism has been levelled at Orson Welles for his connection with the series. His recent radio "appearance" in a play he had written himself is one of the focal points of attack.

NERVOUS FROM RESTLESS NIGHTS?

Is It Your Kidneys?

If kidneys are sluggish or not active enough, these harmful acids and poisons may stay in the blood and cause much misery and distress, and bring on ill health in this regard.

For instance, lazy kidneys may make you nervous if they cause you to lose sleep because of getting up frequently at night. Also may cause dizzy spells, backache, leg cramps or swollen ankles.

Better try a 25-cent box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules — a real kidney corrective and stimulant that may do you a lot of good.

They have been helping people for scores of years to relieve their aches and pains when caused by lazy, sluggish kidneys.

But be sure and ask for and get Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules — the genuine — pure and original. Don't be an easy mark and accept a cheap substitute — Look for the GOLD MEDAL on the box — the sign of purity — 25 cents.

FIRED O. K., QUIT JOB AND NO JOBLESS BENEFITS

A man may black both the boss' eyes, steal all the money out of the safe, and kiss the boss' wife, but still he is eligible to receive unemployment compensation benefits when he gets fired.

He may quit his job to get a better one, only to find that evaporate; he may quit because he is on the night shift and that is injurious to his health; he may quit for other good reasons, and he cannot receive benefits. That's because he quits—he doesn't get fired.

Such was the substance of argument advanced by Kenneth I. Taylor, legislative agent for the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, at a hearing before the legislative committee on labor and industries at the State House today.

The committee had before it eight bills relating to labor laws seven of which had been presented by the federation, most of them dealing with improving by amendment the existing unemployment compensation laws.

Taylor said the original compensation laws provided for payments to a man who quits his job and is unable to find another, but the provision is not in the present laws.

WOULDN'T a sprinter or a long-distance runner look silly trying to race with a clothespin firmly clamped on his nose!

Yet, in a sense, something fairly close to that happens in nearly every car that lacks Buick's sensational Compound Carburetion.†

For your engine has to breathe in huge quantities of air to be mixed with gasoline before it is burned in the cylinders.

But single-carburetor fuel supply systems can handle only a given volume of air.

To that extent, then, an ordinary engine has a clothespin on its nose – a limitation on air supply for big power operation.

We remove that clothespin very simply – by having two carburetors; one that handles all casual driving smoothly and efficiently, another to jump in with more air and more fuel when you call for extra power by stepping on the gas treadle!

Simple? Very simple indeed.

And simply marvelous in the extra FIREBALL wallop it gives you and in the gas savings you get – as much as 10% to 15% over previous Buicks with the same-size engines.

Maybe you'd better go see your Buick dealer now.

WORKERS FACE JOB LOSS THROUGH LACK OF TOOLS

Hundreds of skilled workmen face the possibility of being laid off temporarily because of a lack of materials and tools, the Massachusetts Division of Unemployment Compensation said today.

In its monthly report, the division said that despite a general demand for skilled metal tradesmen, some "temporary lay-offs" have resulted from this lack, the reason for which was not put forth by the division.

The specific materials and tools listed as lacking are: Aluminum parts, castings, machine tools, steel brass and copper, bakelite, bushings, nickel alloy, steel plate castings, zinc, steel tubing and grinding machines.

"The general need for skilled tradesmen—outside the industries feeling the reported tool and material shortage—is "now being noticeably aggravated by an increasing demand for workers in occupations relating to shipbuilding," said the reoprt.

Wheeler Holds Bankers Forcing U. S. Toward War

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN
Special to the Boston Evening American

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 24—A charge that international bankers and British interests are exerting tremendous pressure on President Roosevelt to induce him to throw the United States into the European war, climaxed a militant speech here by Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, Democratic spokesman for the non-partisan non-intervention groups in Congress.

Before an audience of 8000 that packed the main arena of the Milwaukee Auditorium, the leader of the Senate opponents of the lend-lease law and the $7,000,000,000 aid to England, brought his fighting crusade against war to the heart of a state which the President carried by more than 25,000 only six months ago.

BIG OVATION

A tremendous ovation greeted him when he was introduced by former Governor Phil La Follette, son of the elder Bob La Follette, whose presidential running-mate Senator Wheeler was in 1924 on the Progressive ticket.

At the mass meeting Senator Wheeler made a statement regarded as of considerable political significance, when he said that if the people were betrayed into war by the leaders of the two major parties, a new party would arise which would place the interest of this country first.

The mass meeting adopted a resolution pledging national unity through an invincible land, sea and air force, and asking President Roosevelt to keep his campaign pledges not to involve this country in war.

Senator Wheeler said:

"I realize that the President is in a very difficult position. On Oct. 20, 1940, he said to the electorate:

"'Fathers and mothers, I give you one assurance. I have said before, but I shall say it again and again—your boys are not going to be sent to any foreign wars.'

SOLEMN PLEDGE

"That was the President's solemn pledge. But his ambassador, Mr. Bullitt, had already promised Poland and other countries of Europe that this republic of ours would join them in their wars.

"Tremendous pressure is being exerted upon President Roosevelt by the international bankers and the British. They demand that the United States convoy, that the United States go to war, and that President Roosevelt keep the promises made by Bullitt rather than his own promises to the American people."

BRITAIN LOSING, U. S. TOLD BY LINDY

on the British Isles, and there is not enough landing space for airplane squadrons to match those of Germany.

WEAKENED OURSELVES

"We have weakened ourselves for many months and still worse we have divided our own people by this dabbling in Europe's wars. While we should have been concentrating on American defense, we have been forced to argue over foreign quarrels.

"We must turn our eyes and our faith back to our own country before it is too late. And when we do this, a different vista opens before us. Practically every difficulty we would face in invading Europe becomes an asset to us in defending America.

"The United States is better situated from a military standpoint than any other nation in the world. Even in our present condition of unpreparedness, no foreign power is in position to invade us today.

"If we concentrate on our own defense, and build the strength that this nation should maintain, no foreign army will ever attempt to land on American shores."

Claiming that more than 80 per cent of the American population opposes war, Lindbergh charged that "we have been led toward war by a minority of our people—this minority has power; it has influence; it has a loud voice, but it does not represent the American people."

U. S. Sen. David I. Walsh of Massachusetts preceded Lindbergh as a speaker and denounced the current proposal to convoy the lend-lease supplies to Great Britain.

Another speaker was novelist Kathleen Norris, who urged Americans to remember that "Europe has been at war for a thousand years" and that we have no place in quarrels in which "every borderline has been soaked in each generation with young blood."

Treasury Urges 16.5 P. C. Increase in Income Tax proposed. These include: One and one-half cents additional a package on cigarettes; doubling cigar, tobacco and snuff rates; $1 per barrel increase on beer; $1 per gallon on liquor and 16 2-3 per cent increase on wine.

Explaining the propsed increase on peersons with small incomes Sullivan said:

"Under present law, a married person with no dependents and a net income beefore personal exemption of $2500 pays a tax of $11; proposed scheedule will raise his tax to $72 or 2.9 per cent of his net income.

WARNING BY MORGENTHAU

"The same person with a $5000 net income pays $110 under the present law. Under the proposed he would pay $506 or an effective rate of 10.1 per cent. For a married person having no dependents with a $10,000 income the proposed schedule will increase the tax from $528 to $1628, an effective rate of 16.3 per cent.

"In the consideration of these rates I suggested that particular attention be paid not to the percentage of increase but to the amount of the tax and the effective rates. While in some of the lower brackets the increases are several-fold, the proportion of the income represented by the total tax is not unduly large."

Morgenthau in his statement declared that "we are faced with greater challenge than any in the history of the republic."

The Secretary described the most important features of the program as "an increase of income tax rates, a lowering of the minimum income subject to surtax, an increase in excess profits tax and, finally, new excise taxes on a number of commodities which are not essential to the defense program."

Morgenthau urged the committee to "re-examine with a magnifying glass" government expenditures "which are neither for purposes of defense nor for purposes of relief and security from want."

OUTLINES OBJECTIVES

Morgenthau outlined four objectives which the proposed tax program is designed to achieve.

The program presents "a method of paying as we go for a reasonable proportion of our expenditures.

"It is designed so that all sections of the people shall bear their fair share of the burden.

"It will help mobilize our resources for defense by reducing the amount of money that the public can spend for camparatively less important things.

18,000 on Defense Job Strike at San Diego

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 24 (AP)—The building trades council announced today that a strike of 18,000 AFL construction workers was under way at defense projects in support of their wage demands. The extent of the walkout shortly after 8 a. m. had not been determined, K. G. Bitter, council secretary, said.

The workers, engaged in building Army, Navy and marine housing, repair and construction facilities in the San Diego area, are asking the same wage scale prevalent in private industry.

DARLAN GETS NAZI TERMS IN SHOWDOWN

By EARL REEVES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, April 24 (INS)—Vice-Premier Admiral Jean Darlan of France met German Ambassador Otto Abetz in Paris today for what a reliable French source in London termed a "showdown."

This conference will bring Franco-German relations to a head, it was said, and force the hand of Vichy one way or another.

The patience of Germany is now "exhausted," my informant declared, and Chief of Staff Marshal Petain must make a definite decision or take the consequences.

The German attitude will be outlined to Darlan by Abetz in no uncertain terms. The vice-premier will be told to inform Petain, it was said, that unoccupied France "may suffer the fate of Yugoslavia" if the Nazi demands are not heeded.

Principally, my informant said, Mussolini will be given all the French territory he wants.

Exact nature of the German demands is not known but there are persistent reports that Hitler wishes to send troops through unoccupied France into Spain. Germany already has a corridor into the Iberian peninsula on the west, but apparently wishes to strike from two directions if a decision is made to attack Gibraltar by land.

Tempting lures are being dangled before Petain and Darlan. If Vichy submits to Hitler and agrees upon full "collaboration," Mussolini's claims will be pitched entirely, and the Vichy regime will be accorded immediate sovereignty even over the occupied areas of France.

Petain, it was said, will even be granted what is believed to be his most cherished wish—a return of the French government to Paris.

Final decision in the matter must and will be made by this week-end it was said, terms of the "collaboration" will not be made public, my informant declared, until the passage of German troops through France en route to Spain becomes too obvious to hide.

VICHY, France, April 24 (AP)—Arrival of Vice-Premier Admiral Jean Darlan in Paris today was the signal for appearance of a shower of demands in the press for the return of former Vice-Premier Pierre Laval to the Vichy government and recognition of "realities" in view of Balkan events, it was reported here.

BRITISH PRESS BERATES CHIEFS AS 'LATE AGAIN'

LONDON, April 24 (AP)—Frankly writing off the diplomatic and military campaign in the Balkans as a defeat, the British press and public, in a heightening critical mood and chafing under a blackout of definite news from the Greek front, grimly awaited unfolding of the full picture of Britain's reverses.

Two questions were dominant today:

ENCOURAGING NOTE

British saw a lone note of encouragement in North Africa, where Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander of British middle-east forces, was reported to have poised his army for a decisive clash with the Axis mechanized spearhead that has struck across Libya into Egypt.

London newspapers, which until now had scrupulously avoided criticism of the conduct of the Balkan campaign, today reflected a mounting inclination to call for an accounting.

The Daily Mail said:

"The government will do well to realize there is a feeling of grave uneasiness in the country at recent events in the Mediterranean. This uneasiness is born of the conviction that something more could have been done, or some things could have been done differently or more promptly."

The Daily Mail recalled David Lloyd George's assertion in 1915 that the Allied forces in the World War had been "dogged by the mocking specter of 'too late'" and added:

"That is the criticism now—not that we should have withheld support from Greece, but that our effort, both diplomatic and military, was too feeble and too late."

It said Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden had been given the task of welding Turkey, Yugoslavia and Greece into an effective alliance but that he "failed in his mission."

The Daily Herald, Laborite organ, said the outcome of the Balkan campaign had been obvious from the start, adding, "we have not yet overcome the handicap inflicted on this nation by the short-sighted, self-satisfied leadership of the years immediately preceding the war.

HUMILIATION CITED

"Our efforts of the last 12 months—immense though they have seemed to us—leave us still exposed to the humiliation of withdrawal and still distant from the time when we shall push Hitler around the map as he now pushes us."

Of German plans after subjection of Greece, the Daily Herald quoted foreign diplomatic sources as saying Berlin had demanded from Turkey full military control of the Bosporus and Dardanelles straits in exchange for a slice of Grecian Thrace—and had demanded an immediate reply from Ankara.

Foreign sources in Turkey earlier expressed belief the Turks might agree to close the straits to all foreign warships but would not give up control of the vital waterway even if confronted with a German ultimatum and that they would resist passage of Nazi troops through their territory.

Hubby Learns Even Brief Marriage Ties Are Binding

LAS CRUCES, N. M., April 24 (AP)—And so they were married and lived happily—for about 15 minutes.

County Clerk Manuel J. Chavez tells the story of an El Paso couple, married Tuesday.

Yesterday the bridegroom returned to Chavez's office to ask that the marriage license not be recorded — because 15 minutes after the ceremony the bride disappeared with a new car, $100 in cash and her wedding outfit, all gifts from the bridegroom.

Chavez was touched, but the marriage went into the records.

Powder Comes Off Line in Big U. S. Plant

CHARLESTOWN, Ind., April 24 (INS)—The first production line of the $88,548,000 Indiana ordnance works, world's largest smokeless powder plant, goes into operation today, 23 days ahead of schedule.

Lieut.-Col. R. E. Hardy of the Army Quartermaster Corps, said 1500 workers will be employed on the first production line which will have a capacity of 100,000 pounds of powder daily.

When the plant is completed, it will have six production lines with a total capacity of 600,000 pounds of powder daily, enough to supply the needs of an army of more than 1,000,000 men. The second line will be ready for operation by the end of May and the others are scheduled for completion by late summer or early fall.

Rosier, Gov. Neely's Appointee, Seated

WASHINGTON, April 24 (INS)—In one of the bitterest contests in years, the Senate privileges and elections committee by a vote of nine to eight, today awarded a Senate seat for West Virginia to Joseph Rosier, president of the State Teachers College at Fairmont.

Rosier's appointment, by former Sen. Neely (D.) of West Virginia, now governor, represents a victory for the administration. Neely's appointment was contested by Clarence E. Martin of Martinsburg, by former Gov. Homer H. Holt.

U. S. War Supplies Go Down With Ship

LONDON, April 24 (AP)—The United States embassy announced today that a large shipment of supplies from America, including two trucks for military attaches, had been lost through war action in the Atlantic.

The ship carrrying the goods was said to have been torpedoed. Listed among the supplies lost, in addition to the trucks, were about $2000 worth of stationery and 10 pouches of official mail.

Belmont Names 3 Police Lieutenants

At a special meeting of the Belmont selectmen today three sergeants were promoted to police lieutenants, it was announced by Chief William G. Heyd.

They are William Fisher, King st., appointed in 1922; Joseph Drolette, Lexington st., appointed in 1925, and Harry Carey, Randlette ave., appointed in 1914.

The purpose of the promotions, Chief Heyd said, is to provide a lieutenant for desk duty at all times.

Seaplane Channel For Hub Approved

WASHINGTON, April 24 (AP)—The Senate appropriations committee approved today a $1,500,000 appropriation for a seaplane channel in Boston Harbor.

The item was contained in the War Department civil functions appropriation bill. It would provide for a channel 17,000 feet long, extending from President Roads to the Boston Airport.

BRITISH TROOPS HOLDING NAZIS AT THERMOPYLAE

Island of Lemnos, near the Turkish-controlled Dardanelles.

Hitler's high command gave few details of the climactic struggle and made no claim to a major drive through the Allies' "last ditch" defenses.

The high command claimed only that its forces had "succeeded in breaking into Thermopylae positions" in the thrust toward Athens 100 miles south of the storied pass where Leonidas and his Spartans died.

BRITISH HOLD PASS

British rearguard units held the pass, the German high command said, calling the terrain there "especially favorable" — presumably for the defense.

Unrepeated was the claim to a break-through there such as was reported yesterday by authorized Berlin sources.

Authorized quarters yesterday said British attempting to hold the pass had been annihilated and German panzer units were moving toward Athens.

Thirty British tanks were destroyed between Larisa and Lamia before the pass was approached, the high command communique said.

Authorized quarters declared today that there was no great significance in the exact location of the German army at present, holding that only dynamited bridges and natural obstacles were its major problems.

"The only question remaining is how many Tommies we can annihilate before they can make a getaway," it was said.

BATTLE REARGUARD

These quarters expressed doubt that the Greeks and their Allies would attempt to retreat across the narrow land bridge beyond Athens to the Peloponnesus for a last stand there. If that was the intention, they said, the Greek King and government would hardly have gone to Crete.

"In a fight with British rearguards, we succeeded in breaking into Thermopylae positions, which were situated in especially favorable terrain," the German communique said.

Dispatches from Athens said that, despite the tidings from the battle-front, there was no indication of a mass exodus from the Greek capital, already abandoned by King George II and his government, who fled yesterday to the isle of Crete.

In Berlin, at least one German newspaper called for the death of a wholesale batch of royal personages driven from their thrones by Hitler's war machine—recalling the "hang the Kaiser!" cry of the 1914-18 World War.

Thus the Berlin newspaper Zwoelf Uhr Blatt demanded "to the gallows with these deserters" over photographs of 17-year-old King Peter II of Yugoslavia, King Zog of Albania, King George II of Greece, ex-King Carol of Rumania, King Haakon of Norway and Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands.

Greece's high command, explaining the collapse of the Greek armies in the northwest after they had been cut off by German panzer columns, summed up that debacle in seven words:

Hostilities ceased at 6 p. m. last night under the terms of an armistice signed at the Salonika headquarters of German Field Marshal Siegmund List, commander of the Nazi southeast armies.

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, asserted that Il Duce's legions had driven as far as 90 miles in northern Greece before the Greeks surrendered.

By contrast, the Greek high command declared that, until the hour of the armistice, the Greeks kept the Italians off Hellenic soil.

Even though reports in London said the pace of the motorized Nazi drive had slackened, Britain waited impatiently and in an increasingly critical mood for word of the Grecian finale and was prepared to hear the worst.

Already lost were all of northern Greece and Greece's northwestern army of about 250,000 men which had accepted unconditional surrender under the combined might of Germany and Italy.

DUCE LAUDS VICTORY

Mussolini in an order of the day expressed Italy's pride in victory over Greeks, declaring the Italian troops had illuminated their flags "with new glory."

The Bosphorus and Dardanelles—vital straits between the Black and Mediterranean seas—loomed possible as the next Axis objective.

In London the Laborite Daily Herald quoted foreign diplomatic circles as saying Germany had demanded that Turkey exchange military control of the straits for a slice of Greek Thrace and was pressing the Ankara government for a quick reply.

Some observers connected this with the reported Nazi occupation of the Greek islands of Lemnos and Samothrake near the strategic straits and, in Istanbul, diplomatic circles yesterday said they expected German Ambassador Franz von Papen would bring "some proposal" when he returns to Turkey from Berlin.

These sources said they believed Turkey would turn thumbs down on any request for passage of German troops through Turkish territory but might agree to close the Dardanelles to foreign warships.

Mobile Fort Given Army By Chrysler

By DAVID J. WILKIE

Associated Press Automotive Editor

DETROIT, April 24—A formidable-appearing mobile land fortress, first of a steady stream of such units soon to be rolling out of the Chrysler tank arsenal near here, was delivered today to the United States Army.

Presented by the Chrysler dealers national defense committee, the newest weapon of the United States fighting forces, classified by the Army as the M-3 tank, was accepted by Maj.-Gen. Charles M. Wesson, chief of ordnance for the Army.

"The tanks of which this is the first to be produced in this great plant," he said, "will provide the striking power for our new armored forces. We believe it is th best weapon of its type now available and it is our greatest wish that it may never have to be used in battle; that the silent menace of its guns and striking power may be sufficient."

The tank, weighing 28 tons and driven by a 400-horsepower aviation engine, can travel at more than 25 miles an hour and has a cruising range of 100 miles without re-fueling.

Its armament includes a full-sized 75-millimeter field artillery cannon, a 37-millimeter cannon for anti-tank and anti-aircraft use and a number of machine guns both in fixed positions and in a motor-driven revolving turret.

The new tank arsenal, built at a cost of $20,000,000, is expected to be ready for mass production of the new fighting units late this summer. At present about 900 men are engaged in implementing preparations for turning out 14 of the new weapons each day with three shifts of workers. Approximately 10,000 men are expected to be employed in the arsenal before the end of summer.

Nazis Reveal Italians Held in Check by Greeks

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—The German radio today broadcast in full a Greek Army high command communique which included a claim that Italian forces failed to advance into Greek territory before the Greek capitulation.

As the Germans broadcast it, the communique concluded with this:

"It is confirmed that at the moment of capitulation Italian forces had not succeeded in advancing onto Greek territory, but that they were held back on Albanian territory by our troops."

"If in calling to mind our sinfulness we feel ourselves unworthy of her maternal affection, let us lead our children in ever-increasing numbers to her sacred shrine, especially during the month of May, that they may plead our cause—those little ones with innocent souls and lips unstained, who in their limpid eyes seem to mirror and reflect something of the splendor of heaven.

ORDER ON JUSTICE

"United with us in prayer, let them petition that wherever covetous greed now holds sway, there the reign of love may soon prevail; that where now the spirit of reprisal persists, forgiveness may be exercised; that for discord among men there may be substituted loving harmony which reconciles and unites them; and, finally, that where now deep enmities are aroused, unhappily provoking widespread disorder, there may be effected new ties of friendship which will calm the hearts of men and bring to the universe tranquility of an order founded on justice.

"Let these little ones implore of the most amiable Mother of God heavenly comforts for all those who are suffering and particularly for refugees, exiles and prisoners and for wounded in hospitals; let them ask of her perseveringly with their innocent voices that the duration of this awful misfortune be brief so that after having 'rightly suffered for our sins we may at least be relieved by comfort of Divine Grace' (Roman breviary for fourth Sunday in Lent) and that therefore there may soon return to earth resplendant rays of universal, substantial and lasting peace which, in order to conform to the inviolate demands of justice and charity, will not conceal germs of discord and rancor, nor embody causes for future wars, but which, by effecting a fraternal, harmonious union of nations bound together in friendship and by helping all peoples to enjoy the fruits of their labor in tranquil freedom, will accompany and lead them with hope and confidence along the paths of their earthly pilgrimage toward the heavenly fatherland.

"Meanwhile, we charge you, our beloved son, to make our wishes and exhortation known to all in the manner which you deem most opportune and, first of all, to sacred pastors who will certainly wish to bring them to the attention of the flock entrusted to their care.

"In pledge of divine grace and in testimony of our benevolence, we most cordially impart apostolic benediction to you, our beloved sons, and to all those—especially children—who will receive this, our exhortation, with ready and spontaneous devotion."

U. S. Extends Patrol Zone

neutrality zone, a fact that was revealed exclusively by International News Service on April 9.

A belief prevailed in diplomatic quarters that the Navy is engaged in patrol duty at least 1000 miles out to sea.

Authoritative administration sources said, however, that the American warships operating beyond the neutrality zone are not engaged in convoy work. Instead, they are carrying out "protective surveillance" along the route followed by ships carrying vital war supplies to Great Britain.

The purpose of this extended patrol duty, it was said, is to discourage German submarines and surface raiders from carrying sea warfare to the American side of the Atlantic and to keep the British convoys advised of the presence of enemy U-boats or raiders.

The American warships, it was learned, have not been instructed to open fire on any German submarines or surface raiders which attacked the British convoys. Their job is to advise the British warships escorting the convoys of the presence of enemy warships before the latter can carry out a surprise attack.

Axis Reports Warship, Freighter Sunk

ROME, April 24 (AP)—Sinking of a destroyer and a merchant ship and direct hits on another 8000-ton vessel in German and Italian attacks on Malta, the Libyan port of Tobruk and targets in the eastern Mediterranean were reported today by the Italian high command.

German bombers sank the destroyer at Malta Tuesday night, it said, and one steamer was sunk and others damaged by Nazi and Fascist raiders at Tobruk harbor yesterday.

$100 FOR A Name!

Help your favorite comic, won't you? Suggest a name, send it in with a brief sentence giving your reason and you may win $100. No expense, no brain-teasers—it's as simple as ABC. But do it right away. The contest closes on April 30th—because the baby has to have a name soon.

HERE ARE THE SIMPLE RULES. READ THEM CAREFULLY, PLEASE

(1)—Print or write plainly on a piece of paper your choice of a name for Blondie's baby daughter and complete this sentence, "I think this name is suitable for the baby because ....." The sentence should contain not more than 25 words.

(2)—Do not enter more than one name and one sentence in this contest.

(3)—TO BE ELIGIBLE ENTRIES MUST BE MAILED BEFORE MIDNIGHT, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1941, TO BOSTON AMERICAN, P. O. BOX 6, GRAND CENTRAL ANNEX, NEW YORK CITY.

(4)—Neatness, suitability and originality of thought and expression, as well as the name, will be the determining factors in awarding the prize of $100.

(5)—Any resident of the United States or Canada may compete, with the exception of employees of this paper or members of their families.

(6)—The prize will be awarded as soon after April 30th as the judging has been finished. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in case of ties. The decision of the judges is final. The judges are Chic Young, Beatrice Fairfax, Inez Robb and Dr. A. R. Dafoe.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Scores Still Trapped In Plymouth Wreckage

PLYMOUTH, Eng., April 24 (INS)—Scores of men, women, and children late today still were trapped in bombed raid shelters and the debris of buildings as rescue workers, worn by three nights of incessant labor, struggled through the wreckage left by the latest Nazi attack on this port.

Although last night's raid was

Although last night's raid was the previous two nights in which the Germans apparently sought to erase from the map this gateway for American goods, it was believed that they dropped more heavy-cali[illegible] bombs than ever before.

And today the authorities are looking for an unidentified woman who stands out for her acts of bravery in three nights of horror which brought innumerable deeds of heroism.

This woman saw a bomb demolish a building, trapping a large number of persons. She grabbed a pick and shovel and led a rescue squad into the ruins.

Just then other big bombs began exploding in the vicinity, and the men in her party ducked for cover. But the woman—for whom a medal now is waiting—continued to work with the scornful taunt: "Either stay up here, or go down into your holes!"

At first, the Germans concentrated on dropping incendiary bombs on Plymouth. This attack was not particularly heavy, but numerous fire bombs fell into one street, and this street served as a blazing beacon for the raiders.

Some of the Nazis' biggest bombs fell into residential districts, workers' quarters and among the ruins of previous raids in this, one of the most frequently bombed of all England's cities.

Four churches were destroyed.

RAF Pounds Brest, Nazis Raid Plymouth

LONDON, April 24 (AP)—Bombers of the Luftwaffe and the Royal Air Force beat opposite courses over the English Channel last night, the Nazis pouring explosives onto Plymouth for the third successive night and the RAF staging its 12th raid on the battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst sheltering in Brest harbor.

In Plymouth, which lies across-channel from Brest, the Nazi bombs churned anew the wreckage left by the previous raids, and caused at least 12 deaths. Eight bodies were taken from a garden shelter which was hurled intact to the roof of a house. Two raiding bombers were reported shot down.

Informed Germans said the naval base at Portsmouth also was attacked by the Luftwaffe.

As in previous raids, the British did not claim a direct hit on the Nazi battleships last night. The communiques have said bombs fell "on or very near" or that they "straddled" the targets.

PIERRE HUSS HONORED FOR WAR STORIES

NEW YORK, April 24 (INS)—Pierre J. Huss, Berlin correspondent and central European manager of International News Service, has won the top award for 1940 in the annual George R. Holmes Memorial Trophy contest, Joseph V. Connolly, president of International News Service, announced today.

Thus the first two winners in the contest inaugurated as a tribute to Holmes, for many years prior to his death in 1939 chief of the I. N. S. bureau in Washington, have been foreign correspondents in the war zones.

Pierre Huss

The award last year went to Kenneth T. Downs, manager of the Paris bureau of I. N. S.

Huss was chosen as this year's winner for his almost uncannily accurate revelations regarding German military strategy leading up to the fall of France and his meticulous coverage of Nazi war operations in Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg.

PREDICTED FRANCE FALL

Huss was chosen largely on the basis of dispatches filed from the battle-line last May, describing the steady collapse of Belgium and clearly predicting that France and the Maginol line could not hold out against the Nazi military juggernaut.

The committee of selection consisted of George W. Healy, Jr., managing editor, New Orleans Times-Picayune; Frank W. Taylor, managing editor, St. Louis Star-Times; Palmer Hoyt, publisher, Portland Oregonian; John B. T. Campbell, managing editor, Los Angeles Herald-Express, and Mr. Connolly.

Huss' dispatch obtained the greatest number of favorable votes in a close race. In addition to a cash prize, the award gives Huss name a place on a burnished oak and bronze memorial plaque to Holmes which stands in the entrance to I. N. S. headquarters in New York.

HUTCHINSON PRAISED

Other correspondents and reporters whose work received high praise included William K. Hutchinson, Holmes' successor as chief of the Washington staff, particularly for his graphic series on the life and career of the late Sen. William E. Borah.

There was high praise also for stories written by Walter Kiernan on Wendell Willkie's campaign and for Inez Robb, Cecil Dickson, Robert Humphreys, James R. Young, Merrill Mueller, James L. Kilgallen, and Ralph B. Jordan.

Hang Fleeing Rulers, Nazi Idea

BERLIN, April 24 (AP)—The newspaper Zwoelf Uhr Blatt observed editorially today that two battles now have been fought at Thermopylae with the defenders in the shade of the invaders' weapons.

The writer recalled the remark attributed to Spartan King Leonidas when he was told that the attacking Persians had closed so many arrows they darkened the sun.

"Then we'll fight in the shade!" shade!"

This week, the newspaper said, the Greeks at Thermopylae forged an equally hopeless fight in the shade of German swords.

Zwoelf Uhr Blatt also displayed the bold headline: "Hitler Growls With These Invaders," above photographs of King Peter II of Yugoslavia, King of Zog of Albania Al Senna, King George II of Greece, ex-King Carol of Rumania, King Haakon of Norway and Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands.

The caption said any of these would have executed one of their soldiers who deserted, and by leaving their countries themselves they qualified for the same punishment.

GRIM HUMOR MARKS LETTER FROM ENGLAND

To: Miss M. Findley,
36 Villa ave.,
Everett, Mass.

From: Miss Alice Gough,
10 Woodbine Grove,
West Derby Road.
Liverpool, England.

My Dear Cousin:

I was so glad to hear from you and know my letter reached you safely. I was beginning to think my mail was lost at sea. Our letters take such a long time to travel now.

Well Mildred, both our families have had many troubles and trials, yet we just have to try to carry on. We are told we must not grumble, but you know we English must have a little grumble at times.

Now to return to the topic of the day. I do hope you don't get bored reading about air raids in every letter, but it just happens to be almost the only news

I am almost afraid to tell you that we have had a quiet time for some weeks.

JERRIES ARRIVES

In my last letter to you I happened to say the same thing, and then those Jerries they came over the very next night and we sampled a bigger blitz than usual, about 200 planes.

I suppose to you people that sounds terrifying and you may imagine that the city must be in ruins. But not likely. We still carried on after the raids, every one doing his best to cheer up the poor people who had lost their families and homes Liverpool, like the rest of Britain, carries on bombs or no bombs. The people are really marvelous.

One shop in a northwestern town, a painter and decorator, was completely demolished, and the next morning after the blitz the proprietor chalked a notice on the part of the ruins, "PROFESSIONAL JEALOUSY." Hitler was supposed to have been a painter and decorator.

Another shop in one town had every window blown in and the notice outside read, "MORE OPEN THAN EVER."

I could write pages telling you similar stories of the cool way the people of Briton take these awful raids.

I have heard little boys argue about how many incendiary bombs dropped in their front garden, and how many they put out, while perhaps one of them will just stand listening and when the debate is over he says, SO WHAT?

BURIED 4 HOURS

One day when I was in the butcher shop a woman was telling us she and her family, including her married daughter, were buried for four hours in the debris that was once their home. Her daughter was taken to the hospital, after she was rescued, and had a lovely baby girl, and such a fine baby, too. The shock had brought the baby before time, thanks to the German bombers.

As soon as a I mention we have had a quiet time off goes Wailing Winnie," as we call it. The sirens wailed about 8:30 tonight but to our great surprise the raiders passed and all clear sounded about 10 minutes later.

My brother Charles was most annoyed as he got himself all prepared for the fire watching as the all clear sounded. The firebombs (if any) always have a lull at Charles' expense because every time he gets prepared for air raids nothing happens.

One night we had rather a heavy raid. He was in bed and mother and I tried for about five hours to make him come down stairs. 20 minutes later the all clear sounded. Now that he is a fine watcher he goes out as soon as the sirens start their wailing. I, too, will probably be doing a little fire spotting at the factory where I work. We have had demonstrations from our ARP warden.

Now I will stop writing for a while to listen to Winston Church ill. What a fellow he is!

BLITZ DESCRIBED

There go the sirens again. Well, so far everything is O. K. Not a sound. Now to get on with my letter.

I must tell you before I forget that the papers you sent me have not arrived. I do hope the censor has not taken them. I shall be very disappointed if he has. I sent you a bundle of our papers two or three days ago. I do hope they don't go astray. If you get them safely I expect you will read the article in one of them describing the blitz on London. You can believe every word of it. They certainly have gone through it.

Yes, mother remembers your uncle and she hopes to make the trip across the pond when this war is over. If all is well with us and we are still alive.

I have written in to several of our papers expressing my opinion about something or other, and have had my letter published, proving that we are really FREE here in England to express our opinions.

ENCLOSES LETTER

I was waiting to hear from our two Canadian Air Force friends, Vaugh and Victor. Now that I have had a letter, I am writing you and I am enclosing Vaugh's letter.

Hoping you and your brother are in the best of health, as we all are here. Write soon. Best wishes and good luck to you both. Love from all.

Your Cousin,
ALICE.

Our Austen Lake in England

By AUSTEN LAKE
STAFF REPORTER, BOSTON AMERICAN
(Copyright, 1941)

LONDON, April—Last night, for the first time, I heard bombs drop on London; lingering, dull detonations like the slamming of heavy doors, and lighting up the rooftops with brief, incandescent flashes. To a recently arrived American, like myself, familiar with the Fourth of July fireworks, it seemed merely a replica of the same sounds. For the senses do not digest its meaning readily. One sees the glow of incendiary fires and hears the heavy impacts, but, at first, eye and ear refuse to convey to the inner intelligence that these are Germans, Britain's racial neighbors, dropping havoc on a city that they can only locate by instrument direction—coldly impersonal murder under the stars.

The warning sirens came first, a succession of strident, far-away screams in an up-and-down octave, beginning thinly from the outer edges of London's West End and progressing in a discordant city-wide crescendo, as the intown signal stations picked up the cry like a pack of beagle hounds. It is a raucous, nerve-wracking sound, which Londoners, beneath their unemotional crust, abhor and are trying vainly to substitute with something less jangling.

There was no concerted rush to cover, no noticeable effect on pedestrians or traffic where I stood in Piccadilly Circus. Motor traffic, always thick in the central area even after blackouts, did not slacken. The big, double-decked buses, showing the faintest glimmer of inside light, paused dutifully for pin-point, red traffic beacons. High-backed taxies, built for top hats, picked up patrons by some sixth, cat's-eye sense. Pedestrians, shapeless blobs in the darkness, groped along with a fatalism born of repetitious boredom—a curb-stone philosophy bred of British phlegm, mass disgust and gambling odds.

SIRENS DIE AWAY

The sirens, their duty done, trailed off to a fading growl, "OWwwww . . ." as the anti-aircraft guns on the outer suburbs began a steady rumble like the concerted tattoo of distant punching bags. Theirs was a duplex voice in which the deeper basso thump of the guns was followed immediately by the baritone explosion of the sky shells—a kind of "Bungg! . . . ruh-ump!" effect.

To Nazi bombers, flying high in the moonlit sky, London must have looked like a sprawling patch of shadowy pebbles, cross hatched with streets and spit by the dark glimmer of the winding Thames—an impersonal target.

For I have heard air-bombers testify that they feel no sensation of dropping disaster on human habitation, just a professional detachment with which one might throw stones at a row of bottles.

The intown batteries, locating the overhead planes by a radio-echo device similar to that used by ships in sounding sea-bottom, took up the chorus. There were no searchlights, no moving fingers of white light sweeping the upper skies. For London's system of range finding by sound detection has done away with that.

This was more realistic! Indeed, to a novice, like myself, who has long ago forgotten tonal comparisons of bombs and gunfire, the effect of the nearby batteries, ear-shattering salvos which might easily be mistaken for bombs, brought fuzz to the tongue. But my Piccadilly companion, a seasoned Londoner, merely shrugged and said:

"It's our noise," adjusting his inverted steel soup-plate a little more snugly on his crown. For the Londoner carries his helmet not to ward off bomb splinters but to shelter his skull against chipped masonry and anti-aircraft splinters.

SHRAPNEL KILLS MANY

And don't think, when the guns are busy, that such souvenirs, little jagged fragments of twisted steel like orange peelings, cannot be picked up casually on any London street. Not a few of the city's casualties, folk who ignored the posted warnings to take cover, have occurred from being struck by spent chunks of shrapnel.

Only a few bombs fell last night, bringing a short, laconic mention in the morning papers, lineage equivalent to U. S. news coverage of a second-rate wrestling bout.

Said the Daily Mail:

"In a brief visitation, the Hun dropped several bombs. Fires were extinguished promptly, casualties were few and the damage small . . ."

Little more than that. And this was buried at the bottom of a column which featured in bold face type the trial of a baronet for love-murder in Kenya, East Africa.

I visited the site of one of these "brief visitations" on Mare st. in the Hackney section of London—a series of brick, smoke-smutted boarding houses as stern and unimaginative as the face of a cliff. There was a tumbled gap in which floors lurched, walls were tumbled into the street, roof joists protruded like charred bones through seared flesh. In one of three wrecked houses, a workman's leather jacket hung ludicrously from a bedroom peg, a bed with a plaid coverlet had slid almost intact into the cellar, a doll carriage lurched beside a blast shattered door sill. Another was a gutted gap, a tangle of powdered brick dust and wooden splinters.

QUICK TO REBUILD

The area was roped off and a demolition squad was busy tidying the street—for while London does rebuild, it hides its scars swiftly.

The molten remains of an incendiary bomb lay among the rubble, a blackened, melted cylinder that had been shaped like an elongated thermos flask and, at impact, had generated 5000 degrees of Fahrenheit heat. I picked it up, scraped off the soot and noted that the date imprinted on its heel said, "1936," indicating the sinister forehandedness with which the Nazi Reich had prepared its campaign of fright.

Yet incendiary bombs are regarded now as more of a nuisance than a menace, since every Londoner above the age of 10, both male and female, has been organized into a vast citywide fire brigade, fully educated to the business of smothering firebombs.

The papers continually carry quarter page, illustrated instructions, a series of pictures that show (1) the incendiary rips through the roof, (2) the householder locates it in his bedroom, (3) he approaches it with a bag of sand carried high to shield his face from intense heat, (4) he places the sand bag on top of the bomb, (5) he squirts water on the ignited carpet and floor.

WIFE COMBS RUINS

As I stood studying the havoc, a bombed out house-wife stumbled through the ruins of her kitchen, attempting to salvage any little utensil and digging out a few twisted stew pans and kettles which she placed in a dooryard pile. Whatever the turmoil in her soul, her face showed no emotion as she fumbled with her pitiful gadgets—a twisted flower urn, a shattered wall clock, a picture of a cream-skinned milk maid, a wooden butter spoon, the shredded half of a housedress. A life's work had been demolished in a swift rushing second.

But there were no tears, no wasted grief! Just the patient resignation of one who faces the fashioning of a new life from fragments of an old. After the war the government would pay her a pittance for the damage—but when and how much she did not know. Meanwhile she and her workman husband would live with neighbors, and find food at hostels.

The woman's mother, an aged lady, had died in the crash and her body had been removed a few hours before to the city mortuary. She had not heard the bomb that killed her. Londoners gather a kind of cold comfort from the knowledge that one never does!

F. ALEXANDER MAGOUN, the distinguished M. I. T. professor, voices interesting views concerning matrimony.

The best age for a young man to marry is around twenty-seven, he says.

A girl, on the other hand, should plan to go to the altar when she is approaching the twenty-third year mark.

Statistics support the Professor's theory, although we doubt very much that birthdays are a principal consideration when two people are in love.

A few years ago the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company made an exhaustive survey of brides' and bridegrooms' ages.

The Company found that when the wife is sixteen, the husband is usually twenty-two.

If a girl defers marriage until she is twenty-one, the man she weds is generally about twenty-four.

But among those who wait until later years, the age of the bridegroom tends to be more like the bride's.

For instance, when a woman of thirty-five marries for the first time, she usually becomes the wife of a man who is also thirty-five.

Law-makers incline similarly towards the opinion that a youthful husband should be older than his bride.

Thirty-six States have laws permitting young women of eighteen to marry without parental consent, but all of these insist that bridegrooms be at least twenty-one.

Only five States—Idaho, New Hampshire, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee—allow men under twenty-one to wed without having first obtained their father's or guardian's approval.

More important than ages is the ability of a man and woman to make a successful marriage.

Recognizing this, Professor Magoun has spent eleven years of research and study in an effort to learn why some unions endure while others fail.

He now advises:

"Do not mistake infatuation for love. Infatuation is not love; it is love of love and nothing else.

"Infatuation is simply another form of self-glory.

"There should be more analysis and less love before marriage and more love and less analysis after marriage, if the happiness of the couple is to be attained.

"It is also necessary for a man to pick a girl who measures up to the same pattern as himself.

"Last but by no means least, a couple should have some agreement before marriage on religion, recreation, money and the raising of children."

Perhaps if New England people took the Professor's recommendations more seriously and designed their married lives more in accord with them, we would be able to close down a few of our over-worked Divorce Courts.

WHO TALKS MORE—a man or a woman?

Interrupting a recent divorce hearing, in which the tenor of testimony was to the effect that all women are chatterboxes, the Judge declared:

"Women have never been adjudged greater talkers than men."

History and experience back this conclusion.

What woman can match the vocal powers of the average Senator or Congressman?

What sewing circle can ever hope to cover the verbal territory of a group of men discussing baseball or war in a barber shop?

Probably Mother Nature knew what men were going to do when she made their speaking organs bigger and stronger than women's.

WOMEN'S INFLUENCE is powerful in Massachusetts, and the Federal Census Bureau explains it convincingly.

Women, government statistics show, outnumber men to such an extent that at the present time there are only ninety-five males for every 100 females.

Of course, our single sisters could take the advice of Horace Greeley and go West, where eligible men are still far in the majority. But we do not think this will ever be necessary.

We have sufficient confidence in our good-looking, tastefully-dressed, cultured Massachusetts women to believe that most of them can stay at home and marry.

If there is any traveling to be done, the wife-seeking gentlemen in other parts of the country will do it.

The Talk of Boston

by Pauline Warren

YOU probably recall the big British Ball staged in Boston a short while ago. Its numerous attractions were so well publicized that the event became the talk of the town for weeks before it took place.

There was one small item in all that talk which puzzled us no end. This was the announcement that the person selling the most chances on the Packard, donated by former Governor Alvan T. Fuller, to be raffled off at the ball, would be given a "citation."

As "citations" are usually given for heroic deeds or distinguished service bringing greater glory to the British Empire, we couldn't see where the selling of chances on a motor car fitted in. And the whole idea of some little Boston girl receiving such an honor from a king became too much for us.

We resolved to investigate.

AT FIRST all we could discover was that Mrs. Richard Bigelow of Dover had sold the most chances. Then, dropping in here and there, we began to hear the poor girl's life was being made miserable by her friends who teased her endlessly, even advising her to learn to curtsy, as an honor of this sort implied that she might even become a "Dame" of the Empire.

Looking up various members of the committee, we finally got more facts.

Mrs. Bigelow, who is one of Boston's most charming young matrons, did not receive a "citation." She did, however, receive a polite letter from Viscount Halifax commending her services and thanking her and her assistants.

This pleased Mrs. Bigelow very much, because she didn't want a citation, anyway. She just wanted to do her bit and help Britain.

It all started while she was in a gown shop in Wellesley one morning. She offered some of the chances to the sales girls and they were snapped up immediately.

The thought then occurred to her that people in the store next door might like some. She barged in and met with success there, too. So she just kept on—went to banks, stores, Chinese laundries, business houses anywhere.

In a small Boston establishment, the proprietor seemed to lose his manners completely at her mention of Britain, using language which would make a dictator envious, while waving his arms and rolling his eyes.

Several big slicing knives and cleavers being about and the storekeeper getting angrier and angrier, Mrs. Bigelow left—pronto.

EASIEST PEOPLE to sell were the Chinese laundryman, who smiled patiently and gave her the money, saying:

She sold nearly 400 chances. This so impressed everybody they roped her in to sell chances for the car—another Packard—to be raffled off at the Carnival for Freedom at the Boston Garden this Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Bigelow has even suspended her musical studies to give her whole time to the cause. She has for the past three years been studying the piano at the New England Conservatory of Music and has played with the Conservatory orchestra.

There is one thing she refuses to neglect—the care of the French refugee—a 14-year-old lad

MRS. RICHARD BIGELOW, POPULAR SOCIALITE
Fled When She Saw Cleavers and Big Slicing Knives

—who is staying at her home in Dover. He's going to the Dover School and can speak English fairly well now. His grades are excellent, and he's crazy about all the American sports his young friends are teaching him.

Mrs. Bigelow, who plays quite a good game of tennis, is just the right match for him.

IF YOU were mystified, as we were, when attending the lecture given by Eve Curie some time ago in Jordan Hall, at finding her escorted by two high military officers in full uniform, this will set your mind at rest.

Mlle. Curie was not being guarded against Nazi spies, or honored with a military guard. Commander Roger Eckfeldt (of the 26th Yankee Division) just happens to be a member of the board at the New England Hospital for Women and Children, which sponsored the lecture, and Mrs. Anita Davis-Chase, head of the committee, decided it would be a graceful gesture to ask Commander Eckfeldt to introduce Mlle. Curie to her audience.

He escorted her home, too, taking her away, after several fruitless attempts, from her admirers in the Green Room, saying:

"Come on, Mamzelle, when you got to go, you got to go!"

Commander Eckfeldt had brought along his friend, Major A. W. K. Billings, and they were both worried at being late in returning to Camp Edwards.

Mlle. Curie's talk was courageous and informative while she pleaded for more help to Britain. Known internationally for her chic, she dressed very simply—in a simple black gown, designed by Molyneux.

We're still baffled at the discovery we made, walking along the upper corridor while Mlle. Curie was speaking with passionate eloquence.

Leaning over the balustrade, with his nose buried in a book, was a red-headed young man, his back squarely turned to the lecture hall.

The book he was reading? (Perhaps we should send this to John Steinbeck.) It was "Grapes of Wrath"!

NORMA TALMADGE: Last week George Jessel was introduced to Mr. Justice Douglas of the U. S. Supreme Court. Jessel related the trouble he's having, trying to sell his Hollywood home—about his wife being a minor, necessitating the appointment of a guardian, and a suit vs. that guardian; then, because your Mexican divorce against him isn't recognized, your delivering a quitclaim deed; and then the final discovery that inasmuch as you had a Mexican divorce from Schenck before marrying George, Schenck's signature was necessary, too, etc., etc. "What does it sound like to you, Judge?" Jessel asked the jurist . . . "To me," ruled Mr. Justice Douglas (Roberts, J., and Hughes, C. J., probably dissenting), "it sounds like a WPA project for lawyers."

HAVE you a voice recording attachment to your radio? If not, get one. It's a lot of fun. Records can now be made so cheaply it is possible to send one to a friend instead of a letter. This would be a good way for a girl to communicate with her boy friend in the Army . . . Note they are investigating gambling in Brooklyn. They were investigating gambling there when I was a kid. There's probably not a man alive who cannot recall that when he was a kid the authorities were investigating gambling in his home town. People will gamble. It's human nature. Gambling is a luxury, not a vice.

"A MAN'S CHARACTER cannot be read in his face," says Dr. Douglas E. Lawson. There's nothing new in such a statement, as Shakespeare observed some time ago: "There's no art to read the mind's construction in the face." However, I think some traits of character are revealed in the face and also if a person is watched closely on certain occasions you can get an inkling of the general trend of his thoughts. And also some idea of his character. An experiment that nearly always fails is when you try to guess by their faces, manner and attire the occupations or professions of the men you see in a railroad train, street car or hotel lobby.

THERE ARE MANY girls named Kay. Too many if you ask me. There are also men named Kay. I suggest the men named Kay get another name and make said name the exclusive property of the female sex . . . When Franklin Pierce was President of the United States, the government for a time paid 12 per cent interest on government bonds. Those certainly were the good old days . . . "That man who said a woman with a past has no future was certainly right. I know from my own experience. I am ready to give up," writes a Chicago client. Don't give up. The man who said "A woman with a past has no future" was just an incurable wisecracker devoted to making plays on words. He didn't know what he was talking about. I know many women with so-called "pasts" who are now quite happy with homes, husbands, children, health and everything.

MUCH IS SAID of mothers, so youthful looking, they are taken to be their daughters' sisters. How about mothers who are taken to be their sons' sisters? Know of a woman 36 years old, who looks to be about 22 and is often taken to be the sister of her son, who is 17 . . . "The modern barber, unlike tonsorialists of the past, speaks only when spoken to by a customer," writes a Chicagoan. "Why don't the manicurists take a hint from the barbers? Why do these nail polishers always launch a volley of senseless chatter at customers and supplement it with a campaign of charm designed to be a tip builder upper?"

MY DAY

By Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt

LAS VEGAS, N. M., Wednesday—We are on the train en route to Los Angeles. We awoke this morning to find ourselves some 7000 feet up in the mountains, where the State of Colorado and the State of New Mexico join. A driving rainstorm, at times turning into snow, has been with us all day, and in places really deep snows lie on the ground. Now we are looking at miles of prairie powdered with snow and have passed many, many cattle and sheep, none of them looking too happy at this last burst of winter

The houses are so far apart in this part of the country one cannot help but think that it requires a different quality to live and to be happy where so much of the time must be spent alone. Even the immediate family of a woman must leave her many lonely hours, for they go to work or to school.

It must be hard sometimes, and yet I think it must give one a sense of self-reliance. Perhaps the nearness to the soil and the great outdoors puts iron into their souls.

I READ the American Red Cross report yesterday on war relief, and I think we can be proud of the record that the help made available by and through the Red Cross up to March 1 totaled in value $22,981,942. I was glad to note that relief to Finland had increased last month, but I was extremely sorry to note in the papers that a shipload of Red Cross supplies bound for Greece had come to grief on its voyage. Somehow, one feels that no Red Cross supplies should be war casualties.

I read, too, a little pamphlet issued by the American Association for Adult Education, called "Women in Defense." It is designed for use by discussion groups and seems to me excellent.

There is a new quarterly magazine called "The Land," published by "Friends of the Land," which should be on everybody's table. It is a magazine which hopes to make us all conservation conscious, because people go down and come up with their land, and ours needs to be conserved.

LAUREL AND HARDY IN ARMY COMEDY

By Louella O. Parsons

Oliver Hardy

HOLLYWOOD, April 24 I couldn't be happier that Laurel and Hardy, who have been away from the screen too long, are booked to do "Forward March," an Army comedy, for 20th Century-Fox. Senor Fat and Senor Thin, as they are called by their Mexican fans, were so popular in Mexico City that it opened all of our eyes to what these two comics mean to movie goers all over the world.

The Mexican Foreign Minister, Ezziquel Padilla, in greeting the stars, said, "The wit of such artists as Laurel and Hardy, Joe E. Brown and Mischa Auer has brought smiles to faces frowning under the weight of care and worry of life itself." On the heels of this glorious Mexico City welcome Oliver and Stan were given a new five-year contract at 20th Century-Fox and it's the intention of Darryl Zanuck and all concerned to make some typical Laurel and Hardy pictures the kind that make you laugh and forget your troubles.

UNLESS SOMETHING very unexpected happens Bing Crosby will do his next crooning on the Warner lot in "Two Steps In Heaven" not to be confused with "One Foot In Heaven," the story about the practical parson. The deal is all but signed for "The Groaner" to sing songs in this Arthur Strawn and Jan Leman yarn. In case you're wondering how Bing can get so far off the Para home lot, he has permission to make outside films and his brother, Everett, has been "talking shop" to Hal Wallis for a week. Of course the title "Two Steps In Heaven" will be changed, on account of not only have Warners had so many pictures with footsteps in their titles but Bing has had "heaven" in so many of his movie marquees.

FOR A GAL who hates clothes, Garbo has spent a lot of time getting fittings at Adrian's studio for her dressy role in her next M-G-M comedy. But Garbo is feminine enough to enjoy seeing herself dressed to the teeth from first to last reel. Nevertheless, it's amusing when you consider how G. G. likes to slouch around in slacks and big sun hats in private life. She'll start her comedy, as yet unnamed, soon and today when I was out on the lot I was told Melvyn Douglas will be her leading man for the third time. Remember, he was with her in "As You Desire Me" and "Ninotchka" for it seems La Garbo enjoys working with the suave Douglas, who doesn't bore her with a lot of idle chatter.

NATALIE HAYS HAMMOND added another feather to her cap of triumphs yesterday . . .

Daughter of a multi-millionaire inventor and world traveler, Miss Hammond has been acclaimed all over the world as an artist, caricaturist and the moving spirit behind many worthwhile civic betterment projects . . . Yesterday she had her first experience as an exhibitor of needlepoint and the affair took place right here in Boston . . .

At her beautiful home on the edge of Gloucester harbor, a miniature museum of priceless gems collected from all corners of the globe, Miss Hammond entertains many celebrities, authors and stage stars . . . so in order to join in their interesting conversations as they gather around the open fire, she temporarily gave up her hobby of painting and took up needlepoint . . .

Serious painting, she found, was something that had to be done while the artist was all alone, whereas needlepoint, on the contrary, is an art which can be practiced in a crowded room . . . and the "needlepointer" can herself engage in the merry conversation . . .

She has designed and created a series of beautiful panels done in such delicate shadings of color that needlepoint experts marvel at the artistry . . . These panels are framed and now on exhibition at the Institute of Modern Art on Beacon st. . . .

Future Bride Feted

EMILY BOUVE OSBORN of Hingham, and her fiance, Henry S. Hopkins of New York, are enjoying a miniature social whirl all their own during the last ten days before their marriage which will take place on Saturday, May 3 in the New North Church, Hingham . . .

Among the festivities which Emily will record in full detail in her wedding memory book will be the luncheon given today by Mrs. George Hinchliffe of Hingham and the luncheon and shower which Cornelia Menard is giving at her home in Cohasset on Saturday . . . From this party Emily and Henry will return with their arms full of useful household gadgets contrived to make housekeeping a bright and cheerful task . . .

When Emily walks down the aisle she will be preceded by two maids of honor and four bridesmaids. The honor maids are Elizabeth Osborn, sister of the bride, and Cornelia Menard, while completing the bevy of attendants are the Misses Helen Davidson of Cohasset, Mary Leach of Orange, Mass., Janet Hopkins of New York city and Betsy Mullins of Albany, N. Y. . . .

Catholic Clubs In Conference

Members of college Catholic Clubs from New York, Philadelphia and Washington will come to Boston this week-end for their annual convention, to be held at the Hotel Somerset on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The life of John Henry Cardinal Newman and Principles of Newmanism, upon which the Federation of College Catholic Clubs base their constitution and activities, is to be the subject of a panel discussion on Saturday afternoon at 1:30

Tomorrow evening the convention will have a formal ball at the Somerset, and on Saturday afternoon informal tea and dancing. On Sunday morning members will receive communion at the 9 o'clock mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, after which there will be a breakfast at the hotel.

A New Figure for Spring

Registered U. S. Patent Office

By IDA JEAN KAIN

At an institution where plenty of vegetables were being served, the incredible happened—scurvy broke out. And the investigation traced the cause of the trouble to the method of cooking.

This sample of the temperamental behavior of Vitamin C goes to show how careful the housewife must be if she is to keep the vitamins in vegetables and fruits until they are consumed, instead of serving foods that did contain vitamins, and was cited by Dr. Faith Fenton, professor of foods and nutrition at Cornell University, in a talk before food editors.

Although each vitamin is a law to itself, Vitamin C—since it is most easily destroyed—may be taken as the criterion.

VALUE LOST

If vegetables have been on hand too long, they are no longer fresh. When kept at room temperature for a few days, the green leafy vegetables lose about half of their Vitamin C content. To be sure of getting the highest Vitamin C value in vegetables, the housewife should market early and select young, tender vegetables which have not been crushed or bruised.

Although the material of the cooking pan is considered unimportant, the method of cooking—as suggested by the investigation at the institution—can make a great difference. Because it allows for the use of very little water and the vegetables are cooked in such a short time, the pressure saucepan is often favored. Moreover, the oxygen is rapidly driven out of the pan after the vegetables are put in, and that's another point in its favor.

Experiments have shown that the less water used, the better. But however much or little water is used, it should be served in some way and not thrown down the drain.

Although Vitamin C is more stable in acid foods, soda should not be added to tomatoes or any other vegetables while cooking.

DON'T DEFROST

In properly selected, prepared and canned vegetables, the Vitamin C is so effectually preserved that the content of the commercially canned products is comparable to that of fresh cooked foods. In reheating the canned vegetables, however, they should not be allowed to simmer and the liquid should be utilized.

Frozen foods also retain their C value. But the food should not be defrosted before cooking and all the "frost" should go into the kettle.

Since Vitamin C is not stored in the body, it must be furnished every day. Better still, three times a day. And rather than depend entirely on one food for this vitamin, it should be conserved in the general foods.

Jellied Dish For Spring

By MARTHA LEE

When the first warm, sunny days of the new season burst upon us, that's the time to get out of the kitchen and get your share of sniffing the spring air.

A jellied dish is the way to manage it. Early in the day we will jelly our chicken, fish or meat dish, tuck it away in the refrigerator and forget it. Then, at meal time, just open a can or two of soup, add an equal quantity of water, heat and serve it as hot first course to the meal—to be followed by our jellied dish.

A suggestion for just such a hearty jellied main course dish is this one. It is filled thick with shrimps and cool, crunchy pieces of celery and cucumber, all in lively-flavored tomato jelly:

SHRIMP AND VEGETABLES IN LEMON-TOMATO JELLY

1 pkg. lemon Jello
¾ cup boiling water
1 can condensed tomato soup
1½ tbsp. lemon juice
1½ tbsp. vinegar
½ tsp. salt
1 cup celery, chipped
¾ cup cucumber, cubed

Pour the boiling water over the lemon Jello and stir until dissolved. Then add the tomato soup, lemon juice, and salt and chill until slightly thickened. Fold in the shrimp, celery and cucumber. Pour in a mold. Chill until firm and serve with mayonnaise dressing. Makes 8 servings.

The following jellied loaf is beautiful to look at and beautiful to eat—the sort of dish we take real pride in serving.

JELLIED HAM-CHICKEN LOAF

2 tbsp. cold water
1 tbsp. gelatin
1 can condensed consomme Madrilene
3 tbsp. lemon juice
2 cups ground cooked ham
1 cup ground chicken
4 tbsp. mayonnaise
¾ tsp. salt
1 pinch pepper
3 eggs, hard-cooked

Sprinkle the gelatin on the cold water and let soak for at least 5 minutes. Then dissolve with the hot consomme Madrilene and add the lemon juice. Pour 3 to 4 tablespoons of this jelly in the bottom of a loaf pan (7½ x 3½ x 3 inches) and let it partially set, then garnish with rings of stuffed olives, pimiento or hard-cooked egg slices, and set aside until firm. When the remaining consomme is partially set add the ground ham, ground chicken, mayonnaise, salt and pepper and mix thoroughly. Put 1-3 of meat mixture in the bottom of the loaf pan, put in the three hard-cooked eggs, arranging end to end through the center of the loaf.

Cover with the remaining meat mixture and put into the refrigerator until set. Turn out on cold platter and garnish with greens. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

JELLIED VEAL LOAF

1 can condensed chicken soup
3 cups cooked veal
2 tsp. gelatin (softened in 2 tbsp. water)
¾ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper

Strain the soup and heat the broth. Mix rice, chicken and celery from the soup with the cooked veal and put all through the food chopper, using the medium blade. Dissolve the gelatin in the hot chicken broth and add to the ground meat mixture, with seasonings.

GARNISH FOR LOAF

1 hard-cooked egg, sliced
5 stuffed olives

Arrange slices of egg and olives in bottom of loaf pan (7x3½x3 inches). Put meat mixture on garnish and place in the refrigerator until firm. Turn on lettuce or other salad greens. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

You Can Be Beautiful

Just the Cure for Dry Skins

By ARLINE GOULD

IT'S THE GIRL who follows an almost religious rite-like routine of beauty care who winds up in her late twenties . . . and thereafter . . . with a better, younger complexion than the natural beauty who wowed them in her teens. And if you have a dry, thin, "sensitive" skin . . . unceasing care of it is even more important . . . evennecessary, if your looks aren't to slip a few notches!

Naturally you feel like pampering the only complexion you have with the best there is . . . particularly after a winter which is showing deepened marks of itself around your eyes, mouth and throat . . so you can't help being thrilled at the chance to buy a $4.50 unguent at the special price of $2!

All types of skin will benefit from this smooth-making "unguent" . . . actually so rich in oils that it's called an unguent instead of a cream . . . but the fine-textured transparent skin type should have it every single day! That's why it's important to know about this sale . . . you can stock up on the best there is . . . at less than half price . . . double the beauty for less than half the price!

This is not a light cream . . . it's actually quite heavy in rich oils . . . but they're whipped by hand to achieve a lightness that makes it wonderfully soothing to dry, dull skins.

It's marvelously speedy in lubricating tiny, premature lines which . . . when these are not eliminated, they fill in as fine furrows.

Because it lubricates so beautifully, this unguent also returns a look of bloom and firmness that a dried out skin has lost . . . and that's a lot of rejuvenating effect to get out of any cream, you'll admit . . . even this super-rich unguent!

To learn about this $4.50 unguent cream for smoothing dry skins, which is available for $2 on a limited special, phone Arline Gould, LIberty 4000, weekdays, except Saturday, or write, care of the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Edith Fellows Heads Boston's Stage Show

Boston's little Edith Fellows, who went to Hollywood to star in "The Five Little Peppers" series, "She Married Her Boss," Madame X" and other popular film productions in recent years, returns to her home town today to make her first stage appearance.

Appearing with the co-stars are Les Juvelys, master acrobats billed as the "Wonder of Two Worlds"; Eddie White, comedy singer; Pat Henning and Company and Marie Bartell and the Williams Brothers.

The screen attractions are "Dark Streets of Cairo," with Sigrid Gurie and Ralph Byrd and "The Great Train Robbery," with Bob Steele. The former picture blends mystery, romance and action against the background of modern Egypt. The latter has to do with a kidnaped train, a rich shipment of gold and plenty of suspense and drama.

Marie Returns As Globe's Star

Having made an unforgettable impression on Globe burlesque patrons, handsome Marie Cord has been recalled for a repeat engagement.

And so tomorrow she is returning at the head of her own troupe ing at the head of her own troupe of 70 burlesquers with a new and even more weirdly beautiful repertoire of dance creations.

Another eye-taking beauty in this aggregation of pulchritude and comic insanities is Jean Carter, a fugitive from Havana's gayest nightspots. Making it a trio of fetching teasers will be Pauline, who brings the newest version of Egyptian terpsichore in her dance-kit.

Looney Lewis, by popular demand, is remaining a second week to guide the cast's zanies into uncharted laugh detours, these including Frank C. Smith, Harry Ryan, Ted Kent, Jack LaMont and Irving Benson.

Vaudeville's Marion Young and Leonard Laurence and the Globe's own frontline of defense, the 30 dancing Bernardolis, make up the remainder of the company.

Staring with the new show, the summer policy of all seats for 25 cents plus tax up to noon will prevail.

'Theater' Seat Sale Opens

Seats are now on sale at the Plymouth box-office for the new Somerset Maugham-Guy Bolton play, "Theater," which brings Cornelia Otis Skinner to that playhouse Monday evening in her first appearance on the American stage as the star of a new play.

The play also marks the first stage enterprise with which Maugham has been connected in the past eight years. In some other respects, however, "Theater" is not a first. It is the 60th production of John Golden, who has produced in recent years such hits as "Susan and God," "Skylark" and "Claudia," as well as such history-making successes of the more remote "Lightnin'" and "Seventh Heaven." And "Theater" is the sixth play of the American Theater Society season here.

Currently in Baltimore, "Theater" opened successfully in Washington two weeks ago.

Francis-Aherne Feature on Bill

Deanna Durbin's "Nice Girl?" the lovely, young singing star's newest and ninth film hit, is remaining at the Keith Memorial a second week by popular demand.

In "Nice Girl," Deanna, now on an off-screen honeymoon, makes a departure from her accepted nice-girl role and turns vamp for a night. But because she has been so wisely brought up by "Papa" Bob Benchley and also because "wolf" Franchot Tone won't be a human guinea-pig for the inexperienced Deanna's first try at luring, you can erase the question-mark in the title.

Deanna's sisters, the stage-struck Anne Gwynne and the boy-struck Ann Gillis, make an interesting trio of the Dana girls, whose widowed father is a college professor who has only one house-rule—"all jokes must be funny."

You'll enjoy the Danas and the Danas' housekeeper, Helen Broderick, and the housekeeper's old-faithful, Walter Brennan. Robert Stack, as the boy Deanna really loves and to whom she becomes engaged at long last, is boyishly charming.

Best of all is Deanna's enchanting voice singing "Old Folks At Home" and four other numbers.

The second picture, "The Man Who Lost Himself," presents Kay Francis and Brian Aherne instandem, the latter in a dual role that packs plenty of embarrassment for the the good-looking gentleman at times.

DEANNA DURBIN'S first romantic lead in "First Love" was 20-year-old Robert Stack, who appears as Deanne's movie boy friend again in Universal's "Nice Girl?" Deanna's ninth film hit is remaining a second week on Keith Memorial screen.

'Rose Marie' Stays 3d Week at Shubert

"Rose Marie," revival production of the popular operetta with Nancy McCord and Alexander Gray co-starring, is to remain a third week at the Shubert Theater by popular demand. Following the final performance here Saturday night, May 3, it will move on to Dallas, Tex., and a summer run there.

New Clark Comedy Opens Here April 15

The opening of the new Vernon Sulvaine farce comedy, "Women Aren't Angels," starring Bobby Clark and Melville Cooper, has been postponed from Monday, May 12, to Thursday, May 15. An earlier announcement indicated the switch from the previously assigned Plymouth to the Wilbur Theater.

Included in the supporting cast are Elizabeth Sunderland, Bertha Belmore, A. P. Kaye, Walter Burk.

'Fantasia' Will End Run on May 3

"Fantasia," which it had appeared was tenanting the Majestic Theater for the summer, will be on the move after May 3.

But ten more days remain in which to see and hear this fabulous Walt Disney-Leopold Stokowski film triumph which has added another sensory enjoyment to music—seeing.

Countless persons have seen and heard "Fantasia" since it premiered here 13 weeks ago, many returning to see it again.

'Man Betrayed' At Trans-Lux

By PEGGY DOYLE

The long arm of coincidence gets considerable of a workout in "The Man Betrayed," new Trans-Lux screen offering which presents John Wayne as the David who one-handed smashes the Goliath of corrupt party politics.

Heavily embroidered with cliches and chuckful of too pat situations, "The Man Betrayed" can be written down as a case of the cast betrayed. Such fine performers as Edward Ellis, Wallace Ford and lovely Frances Dee frequently appear self-conscious and embarrassed at the spot they find themselves in.

Wayne's role is that of a hick lawyer who comes to the big city to investigate the murder, officially tabbed suicide, of a young basketball player-friend. Wayne meets the political boss, Edward Ellis, and the boss' daughter, Miss Dee.

The fact that he falls in love with the latter does not interfere with his one-man fight to crack down on the former's corrupt machine, although there are awkward moments. His success, thanks to the most fortunate juxtaposition of events, is amazing and complete . . . and should be a revelation to the hard-working FBI.

In the end, "Boss" Edward Ellis, who done wrong only because he wanted to do right by his little gal, tells all to the D. A. and retires to quiet Spring Valley with his prospective son-in-law, the one-man wrecking crew, and the bride-to-be, Frances Dee.

Miss Dee, in the smartest of wardrobes, deserves a better break than this Republic cinema chain-letter of coincidences, as do Ellis, Wayne, Ford (the memorable Georgs of "Mice and Men," who must recognize in Ward Bond a carbon copy of Lennie), Harold Huber, Alexander Granach and Barnett Parker.

BOSTON After DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

THE MOST VITUPERATIVE squelching of a heckler seen at a Boston nightclub ringside this season was contributed at the midnight show by Archie Robbins, the blithe young performer at the Mayfair . . . A customer (who wore a mustache) became bothersome to young Mr. Robbins at the very outset of his act . . . Frequently, this cutting-down-the-heckler-business isn't what it seems . . . Some comedians, (Jerry Lester, to name one,) build part of their talk routines around a heckler being present.

IF NO CONVENIENT HECKLER is handy to make a nuisance of him or herself, Mr Lester addresses himself to an imaginary pest . . . He does this quite skillfully by fixing his eyes at a safe point away from the ringside, and between two occupied tables It is simplicity itself to create the illusion that some real person — not readily identifiable—is bearing the brunt of Mr Lester's scorn.

WE WEREN'T SURE that Mr. Robbins wasn't creating an illusory stooge for himself when he turned his sarcasm toward a table over his left shoulder . . . Mr. Robbins' first shot was: "Why don't you bore a hole in yourself and let the sap run out!" . . . (This won him an audible horse-laugh from the victim) . . . Archie then poured it on a bit: "You oughtta switch that mustache to your chest and make believe that you're a man."

AT THIS POINT it became apparent that the cracks weren't part of the act . . . Because another laugh greeted the sally, and it came from a gentleman who was wearing a mustache . . . Mr. Robbins wasn't finished . . . his next squelcher was: "What a picture you make, and what a house Chic Sale could build around you—as you are!" . . . The next gibe was more devastating and even less elegant—and very much less printable . . . The customer quit at this point and had squirmed around to another place at his table, where a woman companion intervened between him and the line of the entertainer's sight.

PERHAPS THERE WERE some among the guests who thought that young Robbins had treated his annoyer too savagely . . . But those present who happened to have union cards in the Musicians' Union or the American Guild of Variety Artists realized that the patron had challenged Mr. Robbins with the unpardonable insult of the "profession" . . . He had tossed a handful of small coins on the floor.

SO WHEN YOU HEAR an entertainer cry: "There's a newsboy in the house!"—as Mr. Robbins grimly did at his supper-show—you will know that a duel is on . . . (And the customer never wins.)

THIS BEING the eve of the annual ball of the Boston Newspapermen's Benevolent Association, at which the very best professional entertainment in town is interspersed each year with a handful of the most talented amateurs, the little story of Ann McCormack of Charlestown seems opportune . . . In June of 1938, a testimonial dinner in the same main ballroom at the Copley-Plaza Hotel produced a beautiful little blonde girl, squired by the charitable Joe Rubin, who wished to see the kid "get a break."

THAT DINNER SET A HIGH mark in cordiality of spirit and excellence of entertainment which many think has never been quite approached . . . Certainly, the man for whom it was thrown feels sure that there'll never be another quite like it. (We are speaking for ourself) . . . Miss McCormack was one of a score of young hopefuls from the Boston vicinity who appeared that memorable night . . . She sang "Shoe Shine Boy," and the somewhat overwhelmed guest of honor of that occasion remembers tabbing her as sure-fire material for the professional ranks.

HE DOESN'T REMEMBER writing a piece in this column to that effect, but on testimony of Miss McCormack and her mother —who has four other girls, all talented and all very pretty like Ann—such a piece was written and with it went the advice for the youngster's mother to take her to New York, the market-place for talent.

THAT CLIPPING was the only sesame the adventurous pair, mother and daughter, carried with them to the Big City . . . In the story, we had remarked upon a resemblance young Ann held to the former Dorothy McNulty, whom once we knew quite well . . . The writer had no idea that the item would subsequently be presented to Miss McNulty, or that she too would take an interest in the ambitious young girl and try to help her with a career . . . But Dorothy did . . . (She is the type which would, and since, she has changed her name to Penny Singleton and become famous as "Blondie" of the "Blondie-Dagwood movies, Dorothy has taken care not to change her lovely nature).

WELL, ANN McCORMACK MADE the grade . . . She traveled with Ted Lewis' band as one of three singing girls who are known as the "Dennis Sisters." Ann making her first professional home-time appearance—at the Mayfair . . . She is booked solidly for months, and goes from the Mayfair to the fashionable Beverly Hills Country Club near Lexington, Ky.

BUT THE HINT THAT the "Dennis Sisters" are on the high road to fame is contained in an announcement from one of the leading recording companies . . . The "Dennis Sisters" are to be "built up" . . . They are seen as rivals to the famous Andrews Sisters. (When you see the "Dennis Sisters," Miss McCormack is the blonde.)

THE ENTERTAINERS who play the press frolic tonight can be assured of an appreciative and grateful audience . . . And there may be an Ann McCormack among the handful of amateurs . . . It just might be that young Ruth Casey, a Hyde Park girl, proves to be the one.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

DOES the world pass you by? Do your friends overlook you? Is your family indifferent to your opinions even after years of loyal service And are you plenty sorry for yourself? Then take a tip from this column.

Thousands of people write to this column weekly. These people are all strangers to me and to each other. But they have one thing in common—they all have something to say, something they wish to put on record. And, so far as I'm concerned, I'm equally friendly to them all and willing to give them an even break.

BUT—here's the catch in it—

These unknown friends and fans do not give themselves an even break. Though they have an equal chance, they refuse to use that chance equally. These writers all have something to tell the world—and most of these things are well worth hearing. Yet they are never heard. Why?

Because the writers themselves will not bother to present their own cases so the world will listen.

INSTEAD of deciding what they want to say, then saying it in a simple, direct, forceful manner and writing it so clearly that it may be easily, quickly read, they ramble . . . mumble . . . drift off on detours . . . tell me about their husband's sciatica or their wife's nervous breakdown . . . then take a whack at politics . . . quote a little religion . . . ask me am I really a woman or just a couple of tough talking men . . . and then wind up, somewhere miles off the highway with what they actually started to write.

Or maybe, instead of being waverers, they're rioters and proceed to scream, yell, rant, hoot and bellow at everything in general for a dozen or so single-spaced pages. Such a comfort to read when the boss has got to have your copy in exactly 13 minutes or you stop eating!

Nor is this all. Though they fondly believe that they've the greatest hunch in human history and are yearning madly for an appreciative audience (which I'd gladly supply) they can't be bothered to look up decent writing materials and put their hunch down in legible script so that I can have a Chinaman's chance of reading it.

Instead, they present a pale, watery blur that may be either a recipe for casseroled crab or an ode to the evening star—but darned if I know which.

SO WHAT? So ye heckled columnist, who only has several hundred letters to wade through daily, besides doing her regular job, gives up and takes the count half way down the first page. And the Great Message remains forever unread.

Think it over. You want to put yourself across but—what's your technique? It's the technique that counts. If you don't respect your own message enough to give it a snappy sales talk, it's a cinch nobody else ever will.

An Investment in Love

By Arthur Noble

HILDA GURNING, wealthy and beautiful, was at her wit's end.

The final extension of her visa expired in two weeks and, not wishing to return to Hitler's Austria, she was in her lawyer's office seeking advice.

"Mr. Latimer, what can I do to keep from being deported?" she asked worriedly.

"The only way I know, Miss Gurning, is for you to marry an American," advised Latimer.

"But I don't know any American who would marry me or whom I'd like to marry," said Hilda dejectedly.

"I saw a piece in the paper before the war where an enterprising young man in England set up an agency and, for a fee from wealthy refugee women, would get poor, unfortunate Englishmen to marry them. In that way, the women could become English citizens and be permitted to stay in the country. After the ceremony they need never see their husbands again."

"What are you suggesting?" asked Hilda, puzzled.

"I'm suggesting that you be your own agent and get some American to marry you on a cash basis. You wouldn't automatically become an American citizen, but it would forestall deportation and give the way for you to become one."

"Is that the only solution?" she asked.

As she left the building she noticed a public square across the street. She decided to go over and sit on a bench and make a decision. Finding an empty bench, she sat down.

She sat there some time thinking about her problem. Glancing about she noticed that she was no longer alone on the bench. A young man was seated next to her reading a fragment of newspaper. He was young, certainly not past 30, seedy, but with signs of respectability still etched on his bearded face.

She decided to speak to him.

MARRY ME"

He raised his head and looked her way in a manner which seemed to say, "Quit your fooling," and immediately resumed reading.

"All you have to do is marry me."

"It certainly is no kidding matter with me. I'm an Austrian citizen and my visa has almost expired. The only way I can stay in this country is to marry an American citizen. You are an American citizen, aren't you?"

"Yea, but one of the lowest."

"That doesn't matter—that is if you're not already married."

The Cast of Characters in "Investment in Love"

HILDA GURNING, a wealthy and beautiful refugee.
MATTSON LORRING, who is down and out.
MR. STOREY, a peacemaker, and
MR. LATIMER, a lawyer.

"On the contrary, it seems that I have been overruled on the matter of correct dress. Nevertheless, a marriage is binding regardless of the clothes. Even nudists' weddings are legal," he said with a grin.

"Oh, I wish this was over with," she said impatiently.

"Surley you don't love me on such short acquaintance?"

"Don't misunderstand. This would be a marriage of convenience and in name only. I'm willing to give you a $500 retainer now and the other $500 when the ceremony is performed."

"My visa expires in two weeks. That will be Feb. 15. Let's make it the 14th."

"In two weeks you have a husband."

"Mattson Lorring."

"That an odd name. Mine's Hilda Gurning. Now that we've met, where can I get in touch with you?"

"My address is this bench until you give me that $500 retainer."

"Suppose you come with me to my lawyer's office where we can make arrangements."

After the legal arrangements had ben made Hilda left Lorring in Mr. Latimer's care. The lawyer paid Lorring his $500 retainer and then put him up at a comfortable hotel.

He also hired a private detective to keep an eye on him and see that he didn't skip.

At 2 p. m. on April 14 Hilda and two of her friends were in Hilda's spacious living room waiting for the minister and the bridegroom when her butler announced:

A CHANGED MAN

"Mr. Mattson Lorring."

Hilda turned to see a handsome young man in a morning suit standing in the doorway. Certainly this personable young man couldn't be the one she had picked up on the bench!

"Surely you must remember the man you're going to marry?"

"Well you have changed a bit since I last saw you."

"I hope you never do anything that causes you to be deported," was Lorring's caustic comment as he went out the door.

Hilda Gurning, propped up in bed after finishing her breakfast, was reading a magazine, The Cosmopolite. She was startled to see the name "Mattson Lorring" over one of the articles.

While her curiosity was aroused, she decided it was just a coincidence of names. Nevertheless, she became a regular subscriber of The Cosmopolite and an avid reader of Mattson Lorring's articles.

Until one day, three months after her marriage, she read an article by Mattson Lorring that she definitely did not like.

It was entitled: "An Exchange—Marriage for Citizenship." It related, in detail, her entire arrangement with Lorring.

While the names were changed, there was no doubt as to the identity of the two people involved. Although the public would not know the true identity, her own circle of friends certainly would.

Lorring was busy at his desk when he was told he was wanted in the editor's office He hoped he knew the reason.

"According to your story, Lorring, I presume you two know each other," said Storey, the editor.

"Unfortunately, I do know Mr. Lorring," said Hilda.

"I surely should know my own wife, shouldn't I, Mr Storey?"

"Never mind the banter, gentlemen. What do you intend to do about that article?"

"Now, Mrs. Lorring, you don't deny that the facts that were in the article are true do you?"

"Well, in view of the facts, I can't very well deny that they are true. But that doesn't stop me from telling you what I think of you both."

A NEW START

"Complaints we can stand but libel is another matter," replied Storey. "I think I have a solution to the whole matter. Why don't you two actually go through with this marriage?"

"I'd never consider marriage with that double-crosser," said Hilda huffily.

"Would you leave us alone a minute, Mr. Storey," asked Mattson.

"I always said that no one should be present when a man and his wife want to settle an argument," said Mr Storey, retreating into an anteroom.

"Were you out looking for a story when I met you on the bench?" asked Hilda after Mr. Storey had left the room.

"When you met me that bench was my home. You see I had slipped a bit. I took that $500 you gave me paid my debts, got a new suit and then convinced Storey that I was worth another try."

"So you wrote this story about our arrangement to show your gratitude," said Hilda sarcastically.

"I wrote that story because I hoped you'd read it. I knew that was the only chance I'd have of seeing you again.'

"I was quite sure that you wouldn't see me. So I thought if I wrote the story about our engagement you might be angry enough to come here where I could see you and talk to you."

"Why didn't you try to see me? Maybe I was wishing you would," said Hilda teasingly.

"Perhaps, Mrs. Lorring," said Mattson, with a smile, "you and I had better have lunch together and talk over this unorthodox arrangement."

THE END.

His Asthma Spasms Curbed
Five years ago J. Richards, Welsh Evangelist of 97 Park Row N., Hamilton, Ont., Canada, was asthmatic, lost weight, suffered coughing, choking and wheezing every night—couldn't sleep. Mendaco curbed his spasms promptly and he reports normal weight and feeling fine ever since. Ingredients in Mendaco quickly circulate through the blood and commonly aid nature in loosening thick sticky mucus, thus palliating recurring coughing, choking and wheezing and promoting restful energy building sleep for thousands. Mendaco is not a smoke, dope or injection—just pleasant, tasteless, palliating tablets. Get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c under the printed guarantee of money back if not satisfied.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢

Jane's Fighting Ship Manual Banned to Pupils

CINCINNATI, April 24 (AP)—School children tracing boat pictures from "Jane's Fighting Ships" caused the Cincinnati Public Library to remove the authoritative English manual of world navies from general circulation.

Librarian Chalmers Hadley explained that the book was becoming worn and that he couldn't be sure of getting another.

Legion Installation Ceremonies Sunday

Rev. Michael J. Ahearn, S. J. and Commandant Lawrence J. Quigley will speak at the patriotic meeting and class installation of Suffolk County Council, American Legion.

Ten pretty girls, daughters of Legion members, will participate in a colorful pageant known as the "Parade of Nations" which will be arranged by Community Recreation Service of Boston and the Suffolk County American Legion Auxiliary Glee Club.

Barrel of Fun Tonight at Press Frolic

Fun and frolic and a variety of entertainment, both gay and stirring, is in store for guests tonight at the eighth annual Newspaper Frolic and dinner for the relief fund of the Boston Newspapermens Benefit Association, to be held at the Copley-Plaza.

Dancers may trip the light fantastic to the alluring strains of Ruby Newman's popular band until 2 a. m., an extra hour of dancing. Top flight stars of night club, theater and screen will furnish dazzling entertainment during the evening.

LIST OF STARS

These stars are appearing through co-operation of Barnett 'Barney' Welansky of Cocoanut Grove, Lou Walters of the Latin Quarter, Mickey Redstone of the Mayfair and Al Taxier of Club Versailles. Nancy McChord and members of the "Rose Marie" company from the Shubert Theater will also entertain.

And, just for good measure, there will be an added attraction in a group of girls from the Gertrude Dolan School of the Dance, who will act as usherettes in unique costumes. Hostesses will be debutante models in the latest and most chic of creations.

GOVERNOR GUEST

Guest of honor will be Gov. Saltonstall, and special guests will be members of the Royal Air Force, now in Boston on a visit. A Marine Corps color guard will present colors in the presence of Col. Harold E. Pierce, commanding the Marine Corps detail at the Navy Yard.

And overflowing with cheer will be, as in other years, the Fountain of Youth, where guests may quaff each other's health during the entire evening to the strains of the evening theme song, "Don't Blame It on the Girl," composed by Bill Carlan of the Boston Evening American night staff.

Moreau, Theater Manager, Dies

Armand J. Moreau, 45, widely known in the theatrical world and for years district theater manager for M&P Theaters, died at his home in Portland, Me., it was announced in Boston today.

Moreau was born in Portland and obtained his first job as usher at the Jefferson Theater.

For a time he worked in banks in Boston and Maine, and in the World War served overseas with the First Maine Heavy Artillery. In 1920 he was made manager of the Suffolk Theater at Holyoke, then he managed the Bijou Theater at Springfield.

He joined Famous Players-Lasky and managed many other theatres. He worked in New York and Chicago, and in 1929 was appointed supervisor of 26 theatres in New England.

He is survived by his wife, two sons and two sisters. Mr. Moreau had been ill of double pneumonia early in the winter, and had gone to Florida. Prior to his death, he returned to Maine and was at work when stricken.

Spence Reminds One Of Olaf Hendricksen

NEW YORK, April 24—The more we see of Stanley Spence, the more he reminds us of Olaf Hendricksen.

Olaf was an outfielder with the pre-war pennant winning Red Sox. He was a chunky little guy, fast as a whippet and he could hit. In fact about all he did with those Red Sox was pinch hit because he was with them in the days of Hooper, Speaker and Lewis.

STAN SPENCE

That, chroniclers still claim, was the greatest outfield ever assembled. All three could hit, run and throw. It was because he couldn't throw that speedy Olaf, a product of Brockton in the old New England League, couldn't break into that sterling trio. So Olaf rusted on the bench year in and year out, much as Sam Byrd did with the Yankees when Meusel, Coombs and Ruth were in their hey-day.

Olaf was good, so good that for four years in a row the Red Sox didn't bother to take a recruit outfielder to their Hot Springs, Ark., training camp. Hooper, Speaker and Lewis were iron men, and if anything should happen to one of them, there was always Olaf.

It was an irksome, tedious job, that of Olaf, but fate was kind to him for a moment. That was in 1912 World Series when the Red Sox were playing the Giants. He was brushed off the bench to pinch hit, and his double over the third base bag off Christy Mathewson won the series for the Sox and baseball immortality for Olaf.

Spence, like Olaf, throws and bats left-handed. Built like him too. Not so fast, but a much better thrower and probably a more robust hitter. A fine all-around ball player, but having no more luck than Olaf in crashing the Red Sox outfield.

It looked for a time this spring as if the Sox couldn't keep him off the club.

On Tuesday, April 8, his first inning home run with DiMaggio and Finney on bases beat the Cincinnati Reds in Louisville, 3 to 0.

THREE HITS FOR SPENCE

On Thursday, April 10, the Sox got four hits off the combined offerings of Paul Derringer and Jim Turner in a game at Cincinnati. They were beaten, 5 to 2. Spence got three of those five hits, two of them off the celebrated Mr. Derringer and a resounding triple off Turner.

Spence can mash that potato. In the opening game at Fenway Park against Washington you may recall the round man with the Oriental features who pinch hit for Herb Hash in the seventh and came through with a single to right. That was Spence.

He's a picture at the plate. He holds his bat poised over his shoulder like a left-handed Lajoie. No twisting or jerking. Cool as a morning in November. One of those fellows you feel will hit as soon as he takes his solid stance. More dangerous with two strikes than with none. A slasher who will hit that home run when the club needs it.

Spence, in fact, pinch hit two home runs for the Sox after coming up from Louisville last June 8. But he didn't see much action because DiMaggio's ankle was on the mend and Cramer, Williams and Finney were in good health.

Idleness annoys the 26-year-old Spence. He has a wife and infant daughter to support, and riding the bench never was a lucrative profession unless one happened to be with perennial pennant winners like old Olaf Hendricksen, or Sam Byrd and Arndt Jorgens.

"Comes time to talk contract in the winter," Spence says, "and they ask: 'What did you do to earn a raise?' and you say: 'How can I earn a raise sitting on the bench? Gimme a chance to play, and I'll show you what I can do.'"

It looked rosy for Spence this spring when Ted Williams came up with his injured ankle. The round man was whaling the ball to all corners of the lot, and the Reds, watching him during batting prac-

SOLON BLASTS DELAYS FOR ATHLETES IN DRAFT

WASHINGTON, April 24 (AP)—Rep. O'Toole (D.) of New York made public today a letter to Brig.-Gen. Lewis B. Hershey of the selective service, protesting against what he described as "deferments by local selectibe boards of prominent professional athletes for alleged physical defects."

O'Toole suggested that in cases where professional athletes are found to lack some of the qualifications called for the army that they be inducted into service as coaches in their respective professions.

"In that manner," he said, "they will raise the morale of their fellow citizens who have been inducted and will also be serving their country."

The New Yorker also opposed suggestions he said had been made that the training period for professional baseball players be split because they are engaged in a seasonal profession.

"I do not believe the farmers and other classes of men who are in seasonal professions were given such thought," he said, "and I sincerely hope that no such action will be taken by the administration."

Cong. Kean Blasts Navy Racial Slant

WASHINGTON, April 24 (AP)—A protest against "racial discrimination" in Naval Academy athletics was sent by Rep. Robert Kean (R.) of New Jersey to Admiral Russell Willson, superintendent of the Annapolis Academy.

Kean said he noted news articles stating that the lacrosse team of the Naval Academy refused to take the field against Harvard when one of the members of the Harvard team was a negro. Kean was graduated from Harvard.

Tiger Flag Hopes Die; Hank in Army on May 7

DETROIT, April 24 (AP)—Doleful talk today in Detroit—at any cigar store, tavern or street corner:

The inevitable had come. Hank Greenberg, great slugger of the Detroit Tigers, received his formal orders for induction into the Army.

The summons to Hank was not unexpected, of course, but some ardent fans had held stubbornly to a hope that somehow conditions might have changed so Hank could stay around and hit home runs as usual.

As it is, however, the American League's reputedly highest paid player at $50,000 a year has only 13 playing days left this season with Detroit, and the Tigers definitely are no longer expected to retain their championship.

Local Draft Board No. 23 notified Greenberg to report for induction May 7 at the induction center here. On that day the Tigers have planned to raise their league pennant to the top of the flagpole in Briggs Stadium.

The departure of Greenberg means the breaking up of the most powerful home run combination since the time of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig of the Yankees. It leaves Rudy York alone as the swat king of Detroit.

The cleanup spot probably will fall to York, who is currently batting fifth behind Greenberg, or it might go to Barney McCoskey, at this time hitting .400. To plug the gap in the outfield Manager Del Baker will move in from the bench Bruce Campbell, sure fielder and steady hitter.

Chet Ross Faces Another Month Of Inactivity

Chet Ross, hard-hitting outfielder of the Boston Bees, today faced at least another month of inactivity as a result of torn ligaments in his left ankle.

Dr. Edward J. O'Brien, team physician, said Ross, who suffered the ankle injury while sliding into second base in a pre-season exhibition game with the St. Louis Browns, would be on the bench for at least a month.

Myers Names Teams For Saturday's Duel

Boston College's Head Coach Denny Myers today announced the make-ups of the "Maroon and Gold" squads which will close the Eagles' spring practice session with an inter-squad game Saturday afternoon at Alumni Field.

There will be no charge and the gates will be thrown open to the general public. The game will be the feature of the annual coaching clinic conducted by the Rhode Island high school football coaches association which will be held all day Saturday at the Heights. Head Coach Myers, former Brown line coach and good friend of the Rhody coaches, is the lure in this case.

Though the two squads will be numerically anaemic — because Coach Myers excused a number of gridders from the final two weeks of practice—the starting teams will be liberally sprinkled with veterans of the Sugar Bowl championship game.

BOUDREAU AT QUARTER

The "Maroon" backfield, for instance contains the names of Teddy Williams, Gloucester boy who came into his own in the Sugar Bowl; Frank Maznicki, West Warwick "scat" back who was one of the East's leading scorers last season and Mighty Mike Holovak, the raw boney boy who plays plenty of fullback. Hockey player-blocking back Walter Boudreau will quarterback this group.

In the line the "Maroon" team will start Henry "Hank" Woronicz from Brockton and Don Currivan from Mansfield on the ends; Steve Levanitis (Cambridge) and Leo Strumski (Canton), tackles, Joe Repko (Lansford, Pa.) and Chris Darone, freshman from Malden, guards, and Albert "Tuck" Toomey (freshman from Stoughton), center.

DOHERTY MAY NOT PLAY

Billy Quinn, freshman from Englewood, N. J., via Horace Mann (New York) High School, will call signals to the "Gold" backs. Quinn's mates will be Freshman Johnny McHugh from Dorchester via Kents Hill, Freshman Jimmy Benedetto from Swampscott via Seton Hall and Carl Luca, husky sophomore fror Somerville, who is playing a much-improved game at fullback.

"Gold" substitutes include Charlie Toole, Bill Deegan, John O'Sullivan, Charlie Furbush, Angelo Sisti, Chris Brady, Bob Burns and Ed Doherty.

Doherty, who spent the last couple of days at St. Elizabeth's Hospital with an infected throat, may not be available.

VAN AMBURGH, NICHOLS JOIN SHOOT STAFF

Two outstanding New England rifle shooting experts were added to the official staff of the William Randolph Hearst Citizens Marksmanship championship finals to be held at the 101st Infantry Armory on May 4, according to an announcement made today by Capt. "Pete" Lambert, chief range officer.

Capt. Lambert named Robert Van Amburgh, of Medford, as statistical officer, and Leon E. Nichols, of Needham, as assistant range officer.

"I believe that in Van Amburgh and Nichols we have secured two of the finest qualified rifle authorities in this part of the country," Lambert said. "Both have a wealth of experience in handling major competitions. They know the shooters and they will see to it that the Hearst championships are conducted in the finest possible manner. I feel gratified to know that I will have such capable men working with me."

Van Amburgh, an executive with Lever Brothers which had its rifle team in the winter qualifying matches, is an officer in the Arlington Rifle Club, is past president and present secretary of the Bay State Rifle Ass'n and is well known among the shooting fraternity, particularly in the small bore field.

During the championships held at Damariscotta, Maine, last year, Van Amburgh won with a possible score of 300 with 26 x's. His wife is also an expert shot.

HUSKIES' ACE COMES OUT OF RETIREMENT

Northeastern University's sensational 9-0 opening-game victory over Boston College caused considerable excitement in New England baseball circles, but it had another more important effect. It brought Pitcher Charlie Foster back to the fold.

Foster, big speedballer from Lynn, was undefeated as a junior last year and helped Northeastern win the New England College Conference League championship. Coach Herb Gallagher was counting upon him to be a mound mainstay for the 1941 team.

The Lynn boy is taking a chemical engineering course at Northeastern, however, and the studies are terrific. In addition to a full class schedule, Foster has lengthy laboratory assignments almost every afternoon. For that reason he decided that to study, play baseball, and commute to Lynn would be too much.

SAW WIN OVER B. C.

Foster so informed Gallagher a fortnight ago, and Herb took the news philosophically. He knew that without Foster, the pitching staff would be woefully weak, with sophomore Fred Rice the only standout starting hurler. Inasmuch as he graduated from Northeastern himself, Herb knew that Foster was not fooling about the assignments, however.

Then came the opener with Boston College. Foster was in the stands and watched his 1940 teammates pound out 13 hits while Rice allowed the Eagles only three. He saw Oscar Khoderian and Al Pajonas come up with fielding plays that would rate top applause even in the major leagues. He saw Walter Urbanik continue the clutch-hitting streak that started last season.

All those sights were too much for Charlie. He climbed out of the stand after the game and waited until a flock of well-wishers, including a pair of major league scouts, had finished congratulating Gallagher. Then he walked up and said shyly, "I can't go through another afternoon like this. Have you another suit, coach?"

PRIVATE PRACTICE

Gallagher replied:

"You bet, Charlie. We'll be glad to have you with us."

He might have said a lot more, but Herb is not at all a sentimentalist, and he takes things as they come.

Foster drew his uniform this noon and is starting work tonight. He and Gallagher are working on a plan whereby he will hold individual drills more or less at his convenience. This will enable him to limber up his arm every day without necessitating his staying around the field until 7 o'clock.

The Huskies open defense of their league crown at Rhode Island State on Saturday, and Charlie may pitch two or three innings, just to get his hand in. Johnny Urban, screw-ball artist, is expected to get the starting assignment against the colorful Rams.

Purple Runners Invade Stadium for Tri Meet

A strong Holy Cross track team, led by Co-Captains Johnny Wallace and Charley O'Donnell, will invade Harvard Stadium Saturday for their first triangular meet of the outdoor season against Harvard and Northeastern.

Coach Bart Sullivan will field a team composed largely of veterans and a host of promising sophomores, who outdid themselves last week with a crushing defeat of Brown in their dual meet at Providence.

COMING AROUND

The Crusaders, defending New England champions, point to strength especially in the dashes with Bob McGlone, O'Donnell, McShane, Gillis, Bud Hines, Marcorelle, McKone and Fullan ready to do their share during the outdoor season.

Larry McShane, New England 220 yard champion, has been somewhat slow in rounding to form but has been working out with increasing speed and in all likelihood will be able to give a good account of himself on Saturday.

Jack Haley, star miler of the Purple forces, Paul Cronin and Frank Kelley are ready for the mile, while the New England outdoor two-mile champion, Frank Maloney, will run his specialty.

Somewhat weaker in the field events the past few seasons, the Crusaders can point to a host of possible point scorers this year with Johnny Grigas, Murphy and Paul Dorrington, strapping members of the football team scheduled to do the shot putting and Joe Lynch and Ralph Murray pointing to the discus.

A spectacular race for all should be the low and high hurdles with George Gilson of Holy Cross pitted against Donahue of Harvard. This will give the two boys an opportunity to continue their feud of the indoor season which found them ending the year on about even terms. Gilson has been one of the mainstays of the team in both the high and the low hurdles and from his recent workouts will be hard to beat.

HELMET SAVES REISER FROM FRACTURE

NEW YORK, April 24 (INS)—Pete Reiser, Brooklyn Dodgers' star outfielder, who was knocked unconscious when struck in the head by a ball in yesterday's game with the Phillies, will be kept in Caledonia Hospital for several days under observation, Dr. D. A. McAteer, Jr., said today.

"Reiser has a mild concussion and localized blood clot," Dr. McAteer declared. "He's a very lucky boy, because he certainly would have had a fractured skull but for his helmet, which absorbed part of the shock.

"He'll remain under observation for two or three more days, but if no complications develop, he ought to be playing again in a week at the most."

The 22-year-old player, who has compiled a .355 batting average in the first eight games, was hit in the third inning by a speedy sidearm pitch from Ike Pearson.

3000 Athletes Enter Penn Relay Carnival

By FRANK J. BURKE

PHILADELPHIA, April 24 (INS)—Penn's annual relay carnival is going to be just as huge as ever this year, but the "little fellow" will come in for a lot more credit and attention, according to Penn Track Coach and Meet Director Lawson Robertson.

Blazing headline features like the "super-super" mile are notably missing from the events listed for the carnival which opens tomorrow and continues through Saturday. Instead, Robertson said, the emphasis will be on teamwork and balance—as it should be in a relay.

"We ran a super mile last year," explained Robbie, "and it turned out to be a frost. The winner straggled over the tape in about 4 minutes 25 seconds. This year we haven't exposed the spectators to the danger of such a letdown."

3000 ATHLETES COMPETE

Thus the Franklin Field audience this week-end will have a chance to concentrate on the pulsating thrills that only team co-ordination can afford. Their cheers will compensate the days of backbreaking practice borne by the 3000-odd athletes representing some 500 schools.

"Yes, I'm pretty well satisfied with the entries this year," said Robertson, who is completing his 25th year as Penn track tutor. "The meet is well balanced and despite lack of 'big name' events, there will be plenty of excitement—and maybe a few records.

"I look for Indiana University to set a fast pace and perhaps new standards in the distance medley and sprint medley events. Their lineup includes Campbell Kane, brilliant miler, and Ray Cochran, hurdles champion and an ace in the quarter and half miles.

"Watch North Texas Teachers in the mile relay," cautioned Robbie, "and you might see them better the 3:15.4 time they returned in the Texas games recently. New York University, defending champions, also has a good chance in the mile."

COUNTING ON DUGGER

Usually reticent about his own team, Robertson unloosened this year to bestow his blessing on the Red and Blue's sprinters. Penn, he thinks, has a good chance to shade Pitt and Dartmouth in the 440 and 880-yard relays.

"One individual event that should be good," Robbie diverged, "should be the 120-yard high hurdlers. Ed Dugger, of Tufts, should smash the 13.9 N. C. A. A. standard he established last year. Then in the 100-yard dash we'll have a fine contest between Welby Williams, North Texas, and Barney Ewell, Penn State.

"Incidentally, Johnny Woodruff, the Negro sprinter who made track history at Pitt, will be back this year competing in the Fort Dix relay squad. That'll be in the special service team event."

Spence Revives Old Memories

But Joe Cronin gave the break to Pete Fox, a veteran of two World Series with the Tigers, who is a great "clutch" player and a fine base-runner.

Spence, however, is in the lineup against the Yankees here because Pete Fox is in Boston being treated for an arrogant tooth, and Ted Williams is riding the bench again after his ankle failed its first test in Washington.

Fate, to date, has been unkind to Spence. He not only is working for peanuts but he lives in a hamlet yclept Kinston, N. C., in the winter where there is no opportunity to get a job.

As far back as 1937 he was hitting .320 for Minneapolis. In 1938 he hit .321 for the same club, and the A. A. fans were hailing him as "another Tris Speaker." He's been with the Sox chain six years now, and thinks it's time he should refurbish the family larder.

NEWMARKET TO RUN DERBY IN JUNE

NEWMARKET, Eng., April 24 (AP)—This ancient horse town, suffering economically from restricted racing because of the war, took on new life today as it was announced that Britain's famous Derby and the New Oaks Stakes would be run here June 18 and 19.

The Derby, run at Epsom in normal times, last year was changed to Newmarket. Early this year the Jockey Club set the race for Newbury on June 6 and 7, and Newmarket was saddened. No reason was given for the switch back to Newmarket.

Since the 15th century England's kings have come here to see the races and today, although on a restricted scale, horses work out daily on the beautiful heath.

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—Lou Nova, Los Angeles boxer, and 17 Haitian dancers who will appear at the National Folk Lore Congress at Washington, D. C., arrived today on the United States liner America, returning from a West Indies cruise.

Nova expressed interest in the dancers, asserting he was a student of "dynamic position" and that dancers used the same positions he used in the prize ring.

The dancers' visit was sponsored by the Washington Post. They will give exhibitions of Haitian voodoo, carnival and grotesque dancing in Baltimore and Philadelphia after their Washington appearance.

Joe Cronin's Hitting Keeps Sox on Top

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK, April 24 (INS)—Old Joe Cronin, some of them call him because he is crowding 35 now and has been in baseball livery at one place or another for 16 years, but look who is still playing shortstop for the Boston Red Sox and look at his batting average of .419.

That figure will dwindle before the season is done and he positively can't go on short-stopping forever either, yet the Sox are tied for the American League lead and a good part of their early season success is traceable to the way their pilot is massaging the pitching.

Where will the Sox finish, now that they have started so well? Cronin said he didn't know any more about their chances in the American League race today than he did in spring training, and if anything he was a little more confused than ever.

COUNTS ON HITTING

"We ought to hit," Cronin said and immediately received unanimous agreement because the Sox are a hitting club. "But we're not going too good due to the fact that we have trouble getting pitching and hitting at the same time, or so it seems."

As a sample of what can happen to a ball club when it really settles into a bog, Cronin pointed to yesterday's game with the Yankees. 14 Sox left on the bases and Charlie Wagner beaten by Lefty Gomez and the Yankees on in 11th inning home run by Phil Rizzuto.

"From our standpoint we should have won the game, not taking anything away from anybody," Cronin said. "We made 11 hits, but Gomez stranded us. Sure, he had some stuff, and he ought to win some games for the Yanks."

"And that Rizzuto. I haven't seen much of him yet—but quite enough at that. He'll help the Yankees. He can get around in that short field, and he did hit that 11th inning home run didn't he?"

LIFETIME AVERAGE OF .302

Cronin, a broad-shouldered husky gent who has a lifetime major league batting average of .302, has lost none of his verve or hustle on the ball field, although he can't go places as fast as he used to. He also is still hopeful of getting a pennant sooner or later.

But he is not even thinking much about that now, and spends most of his waking hours hoping that he will manage to get enough consistent pitching to go with the hitting he is certain to get. He spends his sleeping hours dreaming about that.

No, he doesn't have any idea when Ted Williams will be able to play regularly again, although it probably won't be long before his gangling outfield star and slugger will be sufficiently recovered from his cracked ankle to again return to active duty.

"But that is about as indefinite right now as everything else with us—except that we are on top for the time being, just it-ing our way along from day to day," Cronin said, seeming less optimistic than he might be under the circumstances.

What Cronin isn't overlooking, of course, is that there are 148 games left on his schedule and, moreover, he has faced the Yankees only once and hasn't even come up against the Indians and Tigers yet.

BACKSTRETCH BREVITIES

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For the racing week beginning next Monday and ending Saturday, May 3, when a six-day test of the daily double will be featured at Jamaica, Mutuel Manager Herman Frank will set aside 50 windows—40 in the grandstand and 10 in the clubhouse—for this purpose. The daily double will be thoroughly tested and much depends on the "play" if it is to become a part of the regular set-up.

Many of the choicest-bred two-year-old fillies in the country are among the 128 nominations to the 43rd running of the Fashion Stakes which will share honors with the Tobogganing Handicap on opening day at Belmont Park, May 12. Chiquita Mia, Charles S. Howard's fleet daughter of Hadagal, is among the most prominent eligibles to date. Others include the Belair Stud's Marashino, a sister to Gallant Fox; E. R. Bradley's Businesslike, a half-sister to Black Helen and Blowing Wind, a daughter of Burgoo King and Black Helen.

Fifty maiden jumpers have been nominated for the Spring Maiden Steeplechase at Pimlico, April 28. F. Ambrose Clark has nominated six candidates.

Jockey Nick Wall presents the appearance of a 100-pounder who attempted to go six rounds with Joe Louis. Wall's eye was virtually closed tight, the result of being hit when Miss Q. threw her head into the air while at the gate at Jamaica Monday. His nose also is "banged up."

Tony Pelleteri has Andy K in training at Belmont Park and may have him ready for a race at the coming meeting. However, Andy K, which became known as the horse that ran zig-for-zag because of a tendency to bear out, has not been named for any of the Belmont stakes. Andy K's owner believes his horse is an excellent distance runner and he probably will be pointed out for the rich New York handicap at two miles and a quarter which will climax Belmont's autumn meeting.

It took a photo finish at Jamaica yesterday to show that the Wild Rose Farm's Sir Lancelot, a 62-1 shot, was beaten by a nose by Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson's Call to Colors in the main event Salonga Handicap. The victor ran third to King Cole in the Paumonok Handicap.

Work on the second $600,000 improvement job within a year at the Aqueduct track is almost completed. Contractors are ahead of schedule and the plant should be ready before its summer meeting gets under way, June 9. Two new parking areas have been graded, the old receiving barn taken down and work on the steeplechase course is well under way. Additional cables are being connected with the seven mutuel units.

JOE LOUIS FIGURES TO EARN TWO MILLION THIS SUMMER

(The Special AP News Service)

One of the Boston papers started something when it charged Notre Dame is raiding Boston College football talent . . . New England very much het up about it . . . Frank Leahy denied everything from South Bend.

Trainer Max Hirsch has just about made up his mind not to start Dispose (which fell by the wayside last week) in Saturday's Wood Memorial, eastern section of the Derby preview.

Right up to this minute, Joe Louis' ring earnings over a seven and a half year stretch are $1,798,463.46 . . . And those pay days with the Messrs. Baer, Simon, Conn and Nova may shoot him over the two million mark . . . Bad weather cost the Tigers 30 grand during the first week of the season.

DEACON CASHES IN

SPORTS TABLOID

That's Lynn Waldorf moaning—about his Northwestern line . . . Attention, scouts: There's another Joe DiMaggio playing the outfield in the New York U. nine . . . Golfer Francis Ouimet, one of the new owners of the Bees, aspired to be a ball player, but soured on the idea after walking three miles to the nearest playing field every day for two years . . . Every other club in the National League is after Tom Hughes, young Philly right-hander, now with Baltimore . . . Music lovers can tune in next Saturday night if they want to hear Charlie Grimm play a left-handed banjo and Lou Novikoff a right-handed harmonica on that barn dance show . . . William Maxwell, No. 3 player on the Michigan State net team, is ambidextrous and can serve 'em up just as hot with one hand as the other.

THE GAY FIGHT WAY

El Galento, on tour as a wrestling referee, left his wallet, containing ten century notes, under his pillow in a Green River, Wyo., hotel . . . The loss wasn't discovered until 24 hours later in Tremont, Utah . . . P. S.—The hotel found the dough, shipped it along and it caught up with Tony at Salt Lake City.

Eddie Mead, who managed Henry Armstrong to three titles in a little more than a year, will turn promoter if he can get control of one of the small clubs on the subway circuit.

Some of our best boxing minds say Billy Conn will find himself on the outside looking in so far as meeting Louis in June is concerned . . . Joe Gould seems to have Kayo Morgan, the Detroit lightweight, off to a successful comeback.

DAVE WILSON PICKS 3 MORE AT GANSETT

Dave Wilson, nation's premiere handicapper and an EXCLUSIVE feature of the GREEN RACE SPECIAL, continued to click in formidable fashion, accounting for three winners on the Narragansett racing card, yesterday.

The King came through with Cruising $5.50, Fore Isus (best bet) $3.90 and Sir Marlboro $4.30. All Crystal, his second horse in the third race, won and returned $6.70, while Conrad Mann, also handicapped second by Wilson, captured the seventh, paying $3.60.

Jack Conway:

BEATING RACES? NOT BY TAKING FORM HORSES

FORE ISUS came on to win as a good horse should under a smart ride from Jockey Tommy Atkinson over the one mile and a sixteenth distance at Narragansett Park. For a time Chalcolite had taken the lead away from Fore Isus. Once back in the lead Fore Isus was able to shake off Chalcolite and withstand the challenge of Holl Image and Saxonian.

SAM PRICE

Sam Price watched the numbers go up on the board and then the red flash telling folks with tickets on Fore Isus to step around and see one of Mortimer Mahony's bright young men at a payoff window.

Sam took time out to tear up some mutuel tickets. This piece of business complete, Price looked at Dave Wilson's form.

"Fore Isus was Wilson's best bet, and you should have played it," I remarked.

"You can have those odds-on favorites," remarked Price. "I never play any of Wilson's top horses."

"Then why do you always have his form in the Green Race Special with you?" I questioned.

"So as to be sure of making a day's pay at the track," went on Sam. "Come over in the sun and sit down, and I'll tell you how to do it."

"You cannot beat the races playing $2 on favorites," declared Sam. "If one is backing favorites, he must have a big bankroll, pick spots and if necessary do a little progressive wagering.

"Instead I play Wilson."

"You just told me you passed up Dave's best bet, Fore Isus," I interrupted. "That wasn't playing Wilson."

"Only dyed-in-the-wool form players take Wilson's top horses," went on Sam. "I make money playing Wilson's second or third horse to win. On Wednesday, when Cadet Bob, the Wilson horse, was installed a 4 to 5 choice, I gave it to the Indians, and went to Snappy Heels, Dave's second choice. The $18 payoff on Snappy Heels wasn't hard to take.

"In the figures, if you study Wilson's dope on how the horses should run, there is often not much difference between the first and second horses. The third horse in the figures is also frequently right up there at the finish. The difference is usually in the price on the mutuel board.

"For one to beat the galloping ponies he must play prices. When a horse like Snappy Heels is rated at 8 to 1 on the board it is time to have a wager on him."

* * *

Another Bettor Plays Wilson's Third Horses

I MET A RACE track follower at the clubhouse in Hialeah Park, Florida, who told me he always backs Wilson's third horse.

"When they win, and they do frequently, I get a reasonable price. I never play a horse unless he is boing to return at least 3 to 1. You don't have to win so often when you back price horses as when you permit your bankroll to ride on favorites. Wilson can smell out the top form horse 24 hours before a race is held. After I toss that one out I give much thought to Wilson's third choice. I frequently also back his fourth choice, and they always pay well when they win."

There is a Western Union telegraph operator who plays Wilson's three top horses in the first and second races in daily double combinations. It represents a daily investment of $18 and it has frequently shown good profits.

This particular Western Union operator will admit under cross examination that over the years all of his betting systems have eventually crashed.

"I still believe though," said the operator, "that betting on horses has something on buying cats and dogs (meaning, of course, cheap stocks) in the market. Once in a while I see a race and get a few breaths of fresh air."

The young men who live and think larceny around the race tracks seldom bet favorites.

"Sometimes when you bet a favorite even the owner and trainer don't want him to win," remarked one member of what Sgt. Eddie Mack likes to refer to as the "smarts." "To pay feed bills and the other overhead of racing one must have his horse win at a price. This is particularly true of the small horsemen.

"The big stables, of course, are not above this practice, but as a rule they will let their horses go when they are right. Take the case of the Glen Riddle horses who have been cleaning up at Narragansett. They are coming in at short prices."

Whirlaway Battles Our Boots In Keeneland Derby Preview

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 24 (AP)—Whirlaway, Our Boots, two other three-year-olds and the mud today had a date expected to produce the favorite for the Kentucky Derby May 3.

The "other" horses drew scant attention as racing fans began converging on nearby Keeneland track to see last year's top money-winning juveniles compete for the fifth time, in the $10,000-added, mile and an eighth Blue Grass Stakes.

Both Warren Wright's homebred Whirlaway and R. G. Martin's Our Boots are rated as good mud runners, although both were beaten the only time they met on a heavy track, when Bold Irishman took them in the Pimlico Futurity last year.

CARRY SAME WEIGHT

Both horses are to carry the same weight, 123 pounds, as they did a year ago, when Whirlaway scored his only victory over the Woodvale Farm colt, in the Breeders' Futurity at Keeneland.

Our Boots, which held a weight advantage in defeating Whirlaway in the Futurity trial and the Futurity at Belmont last year, will be making his second start of this year.

Both the long-tailed Whirlaway and the taller Our Boots have started once at Keeneland's current meeting and each has been victorious by the same route—coming from far back to triumph.

TWO VALDINA HORSES GO

Opposing the heavy favorites and carrying 121 pounds each will be the entry of the Valdina Farm, Valdina Paul and Valdina Groom—the latter an outsider which finished ahead of Whirlaway in the muddy Arlington Futurity last year.

Wendell Eads is to have the mount Whirlaway, while Conn McCreary, the nation's leading jockey of the year, is to be up on Our Boots when the post time of 4:15 p. m. (C. S. T.) arrives.

DATE SET FOR COBB, RUTH DUEL

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—May 30 and 31 were proposed as tentative dates for the golf "battle of the left-handers," between Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth, with 18 holes to be played in Boston the first day and another 18 on a New York course the second.

Ruth told Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, that this program would be all right for him.

"Mater of fact," rumbled the Bambino, "I won't give you any trouble on any point. It's that Cobb who'll give you headaches about arrangements.

"I see he's already saying he hopes he gets me on a golf course with narrow fairways and tight greens, so that I'll be in the rough all day. Let him talk—I'll do my talking after the match is over."

Cobb issued the challenge to the match, to be played for British war relief, while he was at Augusta, Ga., earlier this month as a spectator at the masters tournament.

Corcoran said the two courses for the match will be named within the next few days.

Cronin Calls on Dickman To Square Yankees Series

By HERB FINNEGAN

NEW YORK, April 24—A ball club which has lost three games in a row ordinarily would be a dejected outfit, but not so the Red Sox this day as they sent Emerson Dickman out to square the two-game series with the Yankees.

The Sox had their chins jutted away out to here because (1) they discovered that Charlie Wagner, in the rubbish heap for four years, really was a pitching gem. (Wagner lost to the Yanks, 4-2, in 11 innings but allowed only nine hits.)

3—Lefty Grove will be back on the mound at Fenway Park tomorrow ready to repeat his two-hit performance against the A's.

Wagner has been the most consistent pitcher the Sox have had all spring, making one wonder if he couldn't have done just as well in other years had he been used regularly. But that's second guessing.

The Beau Frummell was the first Sox pitcher to go the route this spring, hurling a three-hit shutout against Rochester at West Palm Beach the day the Sox returned from Havana. That was on March 31.

DOESN'T SCARE

On April 8, in Louisville, where Wagner is lionized because of his great pitching feats there last fall, he gave the Reds only three scattered singles while blanking them for eight innings. That was the day Spence's home run beat the world champions, 3-0.

Wagner wasn't so hot against Washington at Fenway Park last week, but was in the ball game until the eighth inning when Cramer blasted his three-run triple.

Against the Yankees here he was really great. In only two innings did they get more than one hit, in the seventh and in the rizzuto-homering 11th.

Tommy Henrich, Joe DiMaggio, Charlie Keller and Joe Gordon, the Yanks 3-4-5-6 men were all held hitless, while Bill Dickey got one scratch which Bobby Doerr stopped but couldn't hold.

Wagner got out of jam after jam once passing DiMaggio to get Keller and getting him, later pitching to DiMag, and making him fly to right.

The Sox always have had a penchant for big pitchers with a blinding fast ball, yet they never have had much luck with them.

Wagner has always been more tolerated than respected because he is not a giant. But he's an intellectual giant out on the mound and the word "Yankees" written across a ball player's chest doesn't scare him.

Not only would we like to see more of him but we'd also like to see more of those other "soft-ball" pitchers, fellows like Mike Ryba, and Dick Newsome.

FUTURE LOOKS BRIGHT

Ryba won 24, Newsome 23 in AA ball last year. They couldn't possibly do any worse than the strong-armed boys have been doing the past couple of years, so why not gamble?

Cronin's arm was aching badly as the Sox were coming here from Washington Tuesday night, and he said he would rest it until the Sox arrived in Boston Friday, but once out on the diamond he couldn't resist the temptation to play, and chances are he'll stick in there until his arm drops off.

He made two nice stops and throws in the late innings of yesterday's game, one off Priddy in the eighth another off Dickey in the 10th. Both balls were hit to his right and he made the long throw to first successfully. That was the throw he couldn't make in Washington.

Old Lefty Grove was exceptionally good against the A's last week, holding them to 2 hits in his seven innings tenure. The boys didn't get him any runs as usual but they won the game in the ninth for Herbie Hash. The important fact, however, is that Grove is still able to pitch winning ball.

Grove first, then Dickman, and now Wagner have passed the test with A grades, and when Earl Johnson gets his chance the Sox will find they have some respectable hurling for a change. So in spite of the three successive defeats, the future is not opaque.

They won't lose many close ones with the type of pitching Wagner showed against the Yanks because fellows like Pytlak and Dom DiMaggio don't make a habit of fanning with the bases full. Nor will Jimmy Foxx be grounding out with two men on as he did in the 11th.

Foxxie, by the way, has hit safely in his last five games. He got a double Saturday, a triple Monday and was robbed of a home run when Cramer ran 100 yards to pull down his long drive in the ninth. He got two singles Tuesday, and a double yesterday which traveled 410 feet on the fly and which would have been a home run at Fenway Park ten times over.

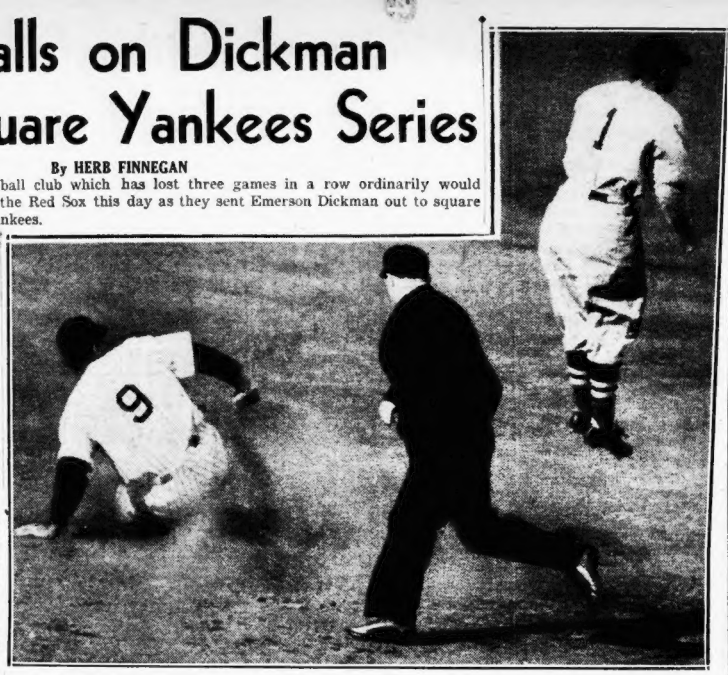
HOT CORNERS

Phil Rizzuto's game-clinching homer in the 11th was his first of the season. He didn't swing at the ball until the last second, and how he pulled it into the left field stands is a mystery. He follows a ball until the last fraction of a second like Ted Williams. Great wrist action. "Everybody's worried about Joe Gordon's first base play except me," said Joe McCarthy before the game. Few Yorkers, however, claim Gordon is dissatisfield at first base and look for him to replace the light-hitting Priddy at second before long.

Tabor fanned thrice. In the fifth, however, he almost broke the game wide open with a drive over third, which Rolfe knocked down and held to a single . . . Then Pytlak fanned with the bases loaded . . . The Sox take the 6 o'clock train this evening and will arrive in Back Bay Station at 11 p. m.



International News Service Photo

Ladies' Day On Fens Card

The female baseball fans will have the first holiday of the season tomorrow afternoon when the Red Sox return to Fenway Park for the opening game of a series with the Philadelphia Athletics.

As in past years, the women will be admitted upon payment of government tax and a small service charge.

The Red Sox management announced that Pete Fox, the hard-hitting outfielder obtained from Detroit this past winter, will be out of the lineup for another two or three days. Fox was sent back to Boston from Washington with a badly swollen, ulcerated tooth. Dr. William Ross is unable to extract the ailing tooth until the swelling recedes.

Class Begins To Tell in Race For Pennants

NEW YORK, April 24 (INS)—Class has already begun to tell in both major leagues and it is apparent that we are not in for any upsetting surprises.

There are no dark horses and even at this early stage it seems likely the teams that figure to finish in the first division in each circuit will do just that.

The Dodgers for instance, looked like bushers the first few days of the season, but they have started to click now and it should not be long before they and the Reds and Cardinals are fighting it out for the lead.

The pitchers are beginning to come into their own, as witness the performances of Whitlow Wyatt of the Dodgers and Bucky Walters of the Reds. Both lost their first starts, but yesterday Wyatt turned in his second straight shutout, a four-hit, 4-0 victory over the Phillies, and Walters blanked the Cubs with five hits, 5 to 0.

DODGERS MUST WEAR CAP

Injuries hampered the Dodgers all last year and they can thank their lucky stars that Larry MacPhail insisted that they all wear protective caps while at bat this year.

For yesterday Pete Reiser, the Dodgers' sensational rookie outfielder, was felled by a fast ball thrown by Ike Pearson and was carried off on a stretcher. The hospital report today says Pete has only a mild concussion, but we hate to think what he might have had were it not for that protective piece inside the cap protecting the side of the skull.

Sam Nahem, a rookie, who was once the property of the Dodgers, turned in a neat three-hit job to tame Max Butcher and the Pirates, 3 to 1, and if he is a fair sample of the youngsters the Cardinals are carrying, the Reds and Dodgers will have plenty to worry about before October.

The Giants, behind Bowman and Lohrman, managed to stagger through against the Bees, 5-4, but they didn't look very impressive in winning and it is generally agreed they won't hold the lead very long.

INDIANS TIE SOX

Over in the other circuit, the Indians climbed to a tie with the Red Sox by trimming the Browns, 5-2, behind Bob Feller, while the Yanks were knocking off the Boston entry in 11 innings, 4 to 2.

Lefty Gomez continued his fine comeback by going the route against the hard-hitting Sax, and rookie Phil Rizzuto continued to draw raves from the cognoscenti by slamming the game-winning homer of Charley Wagner.

The Athletics must have added a few years to old Connie Mack's life when they staged a nine-run rally against Chase and Zuber of the Senators to pull one out of the fire, 11 to 7. During the big uprising Sam Chapman hit a homer and Frank Hayes poled one with the bases loaded and then for good measure Frank added another two innings later.

The Tigers tore into Jack Hallett for an easy 13-5 decision over the White Sox, but the defeat probably didn't worry Mgr. Jimmy Dykes half as much as the bad news that he is going to lose Johnny Rigney to the Army early next month.

Stengel Undaunted With Bees' Showing

By JOE CASHMAN

Professor Charles Dillon Stengel isn't easily discouraged.

He ought to be sitting on the banks of the Charles contemplating a jump into the stream, after what he's seen his Bees do at the Hive the past two afternoons.

Either that, or he ought to be armed with a shotgun ready to fire at those charges of his who, once against the Phils on Tuesday and twice against the Giants yesterday, flopped in the clutch, after mates had filled the sacks with one down, and thereby cost the Swarm two decisions.

But the professor is doing neither.

GOOD RELIEF WORK

Instead he's wearing a smile a yard wide because he saw some impressive relief pitching in the mid-week melee.

"Our hitters will come around all right," he chirps. "It's pitching I'm worried about, and I'm not doing so much worrying on that score after watching Al Javery, Nick Strincevich and 'Lefty' Johnson against the Giants.

"I don't say they will solve our pitching problem but you can set it down that after their showing yesterday none of the three will be released before getting a chance to show what he can do as a starting slinger."

Casey had to call on this trio of twirlers because Dick Errickson, making his third start of the season, ascended n the sixth, wherein the Terrymen put over four runs to cinch a 5-4 decision.

MISSED OPPORTUNITY

"Lefty" Carnett, first to the rescue, walked two batters to fill the bases.

It was at this point that Mr. Javery from North Oxford made his initial appearance of the season. He got Johnny Rucker, up for the second time in the frame, to pop to Rowell for the third out.

"Jave" disappeared in the home half in favor of a pinch-hitter and in came Strincevich to contribute two scoreless chapters, despite being found for a double and four walks.

Finally, in the ninth, Mr. Johnson, from Winchester, made his season's bow by fashioning a scoreless and hitless frame.

One of the three might have gained credit for a victory if the Swarm hadn't fallen down so sadly in the pinch in the seventh.

BEES GO FOR BAD PITCHES

But Bill Lohrman whiffed "Henie" Majeski on a 3-2 pitch that landed in the dirt and disposed of Phil Masi on a pop fly.

Bees Game Off

Rain and wet grounds today caused the postponement of the Bees-Giants game scheduled for National League Field. The club left for Brooklyn where they play a two game series before going to Phillie.

Orange Crew Shifted for Eli

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 24 (AP)—Dick Lea, a junior, replaced George Bonney on the Syracuse University varsity crew today in a last-minute shift as the Orange oarsmen prepared to depart for their opening races against Yale Saturday.

Eagles Grid Squad Honored With Plaque

Melville D. Liming, managing director of the Boston Chammber of Commerce, today unveiled the bronze plaque donated to Boston College to commemorate the undefeated 1940 Eagle football squad.

The ceremony took place in the senior assembly hall in the Tower building where the plaque will be located. Liming, praising the boys for their fine work in the Sugar Bowl, congratulated them on their victory over Tennessee.

BIGGER AND BETTER CIRCUS OPENS IN BOSTON ON MAY 6

Bringing the greatest aggregations of acts and entertainers even this combined outfit has shown, the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus will open its Boston engagement at Boston Garden on Tuesday afternoon, May. 6.

This year there will be 10 performances in Boston, two performances daily from Tuesday through Saturday.

Prominent on the circus double-length flat cars arriving here will be the two steel-girt, air-conditioned villas housing the mightiest amusement attractions of all time—Mr. and Mrs. Gargantua the Great, the world's most publicized gorilla couple.

They will come in with the show on Monday afternoon, May 5.

This year there are many surprise acts, some of them super-thrillers, with the greatest of them the first grand finale ever produced by Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey.

This is called Pan-American, a patriotic surprise pageant that has been bringing the crowds in New York's Madison Square Garden to their feet at every performance.
